

• Cancer Family • Crustacean Type

キャンサー

Cancer

Habitat.....Near water, such as oceans, seashores, and rivers
Disposition.....Meek, devoted, poor at expressing emotions
Diet.....Carnivorous, small fish, shellfish, etc.

Crab monsters that live near water such as oceans. They have the upper body of a woman, a lower body covered in a hard shell, and one of their five pairs of crab legs have become giant pincers. Boasting freakish strength, these pincers can even twist and tear off the iron armor of their prey, but on the other hand they're also proficient enough at delicate, dexterous movement to remove the clothing of their prey without ever tearing it.

When they find a human man that strikes their fancy they will, seeking sex, use their claws to seize him, and draw him near the bosom where the alluring upper body waits. Bubbles containing demonic energy will be released from the gaps in parts of their opening-and-shutting type shell, and envelop the body of the man seized. They have the peculiar habit of using these bubbles with the intention of washing a man's body when they have sex. They wash every inch of a man's body by using their brush-like parts of their shell, the soft palms of the upper body's hands, and sometimes even by covering the entire humanoid part of their body in bubbles and intimately rubbing against the male's body.

This behavior is done to rub their own demonic energy into a man's body, but aside from that they also hate it when a scent or taste other than the man's gets mixed in during sex, so it's said that they do it to cleanly remove excessive filth, odors, other demonic energy, etc. from the man's body. For that reason, they're especially careful about the penis so that "it'll have the pure taste of the man", and in some cases they're so diligent and thorough that they cause men to ejaculate repeatedly in the middle of washing. Once done washing, they finally stuff their cheeks full of their favorite thing, and hold it in their mouth. These actions that could also be taken as a service to the man, will even wash away the man's will to resist, and then they'll end up having sex just like that with each other's bodies bubbled up.

Also, although their bubbles cleanly wash away almost all filth and odor, and even other demonic energy that's stuck to them, they have no effect whatsoever on the husband's own scent and spirit energy. By washing themselves with these bubbles and maintaining a clean body, they seek to ensure that the only thing that covers their body is what belongs to their beloved husband.

Many individuals among them are pretty poor at expressing emotions, so instead emotion appears strongly in their lower body's actions such as when they threaten enemies by making clattering noise with their pincers, or when they express joy or arousal by moving their five pairs of legs restlessly, etc.

When they express the most desire and fondness of all, by moving using their whole body, it appears as if they're dancing, and it's called a "courtship dance". The crab's pincers make a brisk rhythm, bubbles of demonic energy float around, and in the midst of the bubbles they dance, shaking their body intensely and alluringly. Men find the spectacle irresistible. Those charmed by this dance that invites men will end up getting showered in the demonic energy of bursting bubbles during the dance, and their heart will be completely stolen by the unusual dancer.

Kappa

• Sahuagin Family • Aquatic Type

Habitat.....Zipangu Region (rivers, marshes, etc. places near water)
Disposition.....Strong-willed, cheerful
Diet.....Omnivorous, prefers meats, fruits and vegetables (especially cucumbers)

An aquatic type monster that inhabits watery areas like marshes and rivers throughout the land of Zipangu. Their form is close to human, but they have green skin and carry a round, dish-like object on top of their head. They also have a shell, and webbed feet which allow them to swim effortlessly.

Most of them are very mischievous and have a strong-willed personality, but they aren't very violent. Kappa children often intermingle and play with human children. They especially like playing a game popular in Zipangu known as "sumo" which involves pushing one's opponent out of a ring, or pushing one's opponent down. Compared to human girls their bodies are far more robust, and with their mighty strength they can even pin down boys.

However, don't let yourself be fooled; they are monsters, and as far as they are concerned the children they meet are future marks. Through their socialization with human children they unconsciously decide who they will have as their husband.

Even when they push boys over and pin them down during sumo, they experience a powerful arousal that they can't quite understand themselves. Their devilish nature is unconsciously eagerly awaiting the future when they will pin down a man in the same way and have sex with him. Once they have grown a certain amount, their lust suddenly swells greatly. They go into heat, and assault the man they targeted during childhood in an attempt to force intercourse.

When their body is wet their physical abilities increase, and when their scales that appear like clothing get wet, they squeeze their body, producing arousal and increasing lust; so they are extremely dangerous when near the water. If they sight their mark approaching the water's edge, they will drag him in immediately and try to initiate sexual intercourse. One must be very cautious.

The dishes they carry on their heads are always wet with water. The dish is their weak point. If it dries up not only will they lose strength, but they also become extremely sensitive to stimulation. Touch that area and they will no longer be able to move.

The kappa strongly prefer the vegetable known as cucumber. Especially when they're very little they're often seen with a cucumber in their mouth. According to one explanation, it may be that rather than the taste it has more to do with the shape of the cucumber; which they are instinctively drawn to given their devilish nature. It's also said that kappa during childhood may especially prefer cucumbers because it's something they can practice with for when they have sex with a man in the future.

• Scylla Family • Mollusc Type

クラークン

Kraken

Habitat.....Ocean

Disposition.....Calm, easy-going

Diet.....Carnivorous, fish and shellfish, etc.

A type of scylla that has a lower body like a squid. They normally live at the bottom of the ocean and rarely reveal themselves in front of humans. Boasting tremendous strength, they can seize prey and drag it down to the bottom of the sea with their ten flexible tentacles, which possess a countless number of suckers.

Their disposition is extremely calm, but they tend to be too easy-going... When they obtain a human man, they don't fuss over the details. Sometimes they personally drag the entire ship a man is riding on under the water with the feeling of taking their partner by the hand and guiding him into the sea. For that reason, if they begin seeking a man, at that time many other sea monsters who are after the leavings will gather around a kraken almost as if to accompany her.

With the black-colored energy they spit out from their mouth that's like ink, they can create darkness in the entire area around them, trapping the man who struck their fancy in this darkness. In a darkness that lets no light through whatsoever and is even darker than night, the only thing the man will be able to see is their whitely glowing, alluring body. By this means, they are able to create a private space just for the two of them where nothing can come between them, and they can ensure that the man only looks at them.

What's more, being part of the scylla family, they have a great fondness for close contact with a man. They seize a man's body with their ten tentacles, glue their bodies thoroughly together and have sticky, slimy sex. Because of that, not only his field of vision, but his body and heart as well will be filled by their body and the pleasure induced by it. Once sex with them is finished, the black-colored energy will disperse and vanish, and the man will be released from the darkness, but he won't be released from the loving embrace of their tentacles.

In this way, a man who becomes their husband will end up spending his days indulging in their white, soft body while being gently embraced by their arms and tentacles at the bottom of the sea.

Furthermore, a product made from condensing the black-colored energy they release and changing it into a viscous liquid is called "Kraken's ink", and it is treated as a delicacy. Not only is it edible, it can also be a precious magical ingredient for magical items. "Dark lamps" which light a black-colored flame use this ink as fuel, and just the opposite of an ordinary lamp, they produce darkness in the area illuminated. They can produce a "pseudo" night.

• Mermaid Family • Fish Type

マーメイド Mermaid

Habitat.....Ocean

Disposition.....Gentle, naive

Diet.....Omnivorous, mostly seaweed and seafood

A fish type monster that lives in the ocean. Also called "ningyo." They have one of the most gentle dispositions of all the monsters. They almost never aggressively attack humans.

Most of them are hopeless romantics, and they're always waiting for the man who will become their husband. They appear at beaches and on top of reefs, and, dreaming of their yet unseen "princes," they sing in a beautiful voice. Their singing voices contain magical power, and men who hear the songs are completely charmed. They get dizzy and are drawn back to them, and then they end up having a destined meeting with them as their "princes." They're not a race that aggressively attacks humans like other monsters, however, once they do get a man, they're aggressive about sex and use their monstrous bodies to charm him. They strongly charm the man and will probably never let him go.

Also, their "mermaid's blood" has the effect of dramatically increasing the lifespan. It is said that it has this function to make a man's lifespan match her own because a mermaid's lifespan is longer than a human's. Without exception, their husbands will be made to drink this blood.

Furthermore, because of the effect of the "mermaid's blood," it is in extremely high demand among humans seeking eternal youth and longevity, and other monsters who need to extend the lives of their husbands in the same way. The merrow of the same mermaid family is actually the main source of traded mermaid blood, and its blood is in high circulation among the monsters. However, among the humans it is quite rare, so there are many humans who are after mermaids for their blood.

The mermaid in the illustration on the page to the left isn't wearing anything on her lower body, but normally their vagina is concealed by scales and can't be seen. When they start to have sex with a man, they use magic to get rid of the scales, and the vagina will appear in roughly the same position as in a human woman. Since the new mamono lord's assumption of power, they've continued to change and adapt so that having sex with human men is convenient and pleasurable. For that reason, it's not possible for them to lay eggs and then spawn the way ordinary fish do.

• Mermaid Family • Fish Type

メロウ

Merrow

Habitat.....Ocean

Disposition.....Warm, lustful

Diet.....Omnivorous, kelp, fish etc. (mana for those with human men)

A type of mermaid that lives in the sea distinguished by their pink hair and the red cap they wear on their head. They resemble "mermaids" and in the same way, they are a race that is friendly towards humans. However, they are different from the mermaids which have comparatively docile personalities. Even among the mermaid family, they're known as the "most lustful" race. When they find a man who strikes their fancy, they'll use their voluptuous body to seduce him, and aggressively try to initiate sex.

Purportedly "even the inside of their head is pink," and their main interest is sex and romantic affairs with human men. They also peep on the romantic affairs and sex of other monsters, and they like having amorous and obscene discussions. Of course the thing that they enjoy most of all is spending time with their lovers and having sex. When they've fallen in love with a man from the bottom of their heart, they only have eyes for him, and their focus is sex with him. Just as it would appear from their looks, time spent having sex with them will be tinged with a syrupy sweet pink pleasure.

Also, they always wear a hat when they're unmarried. When they make a marriage proposal to a man who strikes their fancy, they entrust the hat to the man. The hat carries the protection of the sea god "Poseidon." The magical power that they need to live in the ocean is contained within it. For that reason, when they lose their hats, they lose that magical power, and they become unable to even swim, but they regain it through the mana they consume during sex with their husband.

In this way, they end up becoming entirely dependent on their husbands, it is a strong indication of their will to always be with their husband and never separate. When a new merrow is born, she is given a hat by "Poseidon" and the "sea bishops" who serve her. Since the power sealed in the hat uses the mother's power, the husband must transfer a lot of mana to the mother each time a child is born.

Also, in the same way as mermaids, they possess the "mermaid's blood" which greatly increases the lifespan of those who drink it. The blood is treasured by monsters who need it to increase the lifespan of their husbands, but it's said the source of distribution is mostly from the merrows. Using the blood, they trade for various things that other monsters possess such as medicines, and accessories. Besides that, they love erotic tales, and often give thanks to other monsters who tell them such stories by offering up blood. For that reason, "mermaid's blood" almost never appears on the market for humans, but for the monsters, there is ample supply.

Furthermore, the mermaid blood collected from them is different from that of a mermaid. Perhaps because of the merrow's disposition, when time passes, the blood will turn pink, and it seems to have the side effect of changing a man's disposition to be much more lustful.

• Mermaid Family • Fish Type

マーシャーク

Mer shark

Habitat.....Ocean

Disposition.....Ferocious, bold, timid

Diet.....Carnivorous: prefers seafood

A race of mermaids with the characteristics of sharks. These monsters are extremely ferocious, just as they look, which is a rarity for the mermaid family since most of them have a docile disposition.

They have excellent senses with which to detect humans, and they can accurately pinpoint the specific location of a man hiding in a ship. Because their senses are excessively keen, detecting a man's presence will even cause them to perceive a man's existence so incredibly strongly that they go wild with lust. If they discover a man who fell into the sea, they'll mercilessly snap at him and try to greedily devour the man's body. They don't actually consume such prey, but because of how they look when they attack humans, they are feared as "man-eating sharks".

They have sharp fangs and strong jaws, and it's said that they are even capable of biting through iron chains and gnawing holes in the bottom of ships. On the other hand, since their fangs contain mamono mana and have the same properties as mamono realm silver, they do not injure humans. Those bitten have mana spill out from inside their body instead of blood, and when a man's mana mixes with their mana, it becomes stained bright red; instead of a blood spray, a mana spray will stain the sea red.

Once bitten, a man will be robbed of mana and feel like he's having his mana gouged out and consumed instead of his flesh. The instant he is bitten, a man's body will be attacked by a throbbing so violent that it's almost enough to render him unconscious, plus there's the continuous heat and oozing of mana afterward, so a man will be robbed of his freedom underwater and be unable to escape from copulation.

They prefer to embrace and entwine each others' bodies as closely as possible during sex, and they will ride a man wildly as if devouring his penis to welcome it deeper in their womb. Additionally, their "shark skin" has rough scales with the same properties as their fangs and when it scrapes against a man during sex, it constantly produces throbbing and heat throughout his whole body. A man will be unable to go without venting it inside them, and he'll end up repeatedly ejaculating over and over.

Although they are ferocious monsters in this way, they actually also have a timid nature, which becomes strikingly apparent after obtaining a husband. During intercourse, they often nibble their husband's body, but the reason for this behavior is that they dislike it when their husband separates his body from theirs. On such occasions, they can be put at ease by head-patting or a firm embrace.

Also, perhaps because in the age of the former mamono lords their entire body, including fangs, shark skin, etc., was a deadly weapon for wounding humans; other than during sex, they treat their husband gently and carefully as if he were a fragile treasure. You could even say they appear over-anxious, and they will turn their ferocity towards anything which could potentially harm their husband.

Furthermore, among the humans who fear them, it is said that the scent of blood draws them near. They actually are sensitive to the scent of human blood, and if there's a human bleeding in the sea, they'll swim there at full speed even from a far away location. However, it's not to attack, it's just because they get worried and rush to come help. Supposedly, sometimes they may even show up faster than the "sea bishops" who save those who are drowning.

• Succubus Family • Aquatic Type

ネレイス

Nereid

Habitat.....Ocean

Disposition.....Lustful, calm

Diet.....Mana of human men

Aquatic monsters known as "daughters of the sea." They're a kind of sea-loving succubus that inhabits the ocean. Women who drown in the ocean and have their bodies completely violated by the magical power of the sea god "Poseidon" are changed into nereids. Normally they are calm like the sea, and free-spirited, but when they have sex with a man they go wild like a stormy sea and indulge in the pleasure.

When human women are changed into "nereids" from having their whole body violated by Poseidon's magical power, they are overcome with waves of strong pleasure and sexual impulses. Due to this, the restraint and repression they had as humans is completely swept away. They get a sense of freedom that they never experienced as humans, and become filled with happiness. And then their body and heart become mamono, and they start thinking of life in the sea as the ultimate happiness.

If a woman who was changed into a nereid had a man she loved on dry land, she will change herself into a human form, and go onto land to seek him out. Then, using her transformed body, she will seduce the man, and sink him into the depths of pleasure, as if he were sinking to the bottom of the sea. After capturing the man in this way, the two of them will return to the sea.

Nereids who bring back men mostly keep having sex with their beloved husbands at the bottom of the sea. At the bottom of the gentle, quiet sea, the only existence they can sense is their beloved man. Undisturbed by anyone, they repeatedly have violent sex with the man like a storm. The days spent ascertaining one another's violent, yet gentle, love daily are the happiest days of their lives to both them and the men who became their prisoners.

However, unmarried nereids who haven't gotten a man come up near the surface of the water, so they are very dangerous beings. Besides trying to drag men they like into the sea, they do the same to women in an attempt to change them into nereids in order to share the feelings of liberation and happiness that they have obtained.

• Dragon Family • Mermaid Type

乙姫 (オトヒメ)

Otohime

Habitat.....Zipangu Region (sea)

Disposition.....Selfish, cheerful, devoted

Diet.....Carnivorous: fish and shellfish, etc.

Monster princesses that rule over "ryugujo" which exist at the bottom of the sea in the Zipangu region. They are treated as mermaids, but they're actually a kind of powerful dragon that possesses the power to manipulate sea currents and cause tsunamis. Depending on the area, they are worshiped as gods of the ocean. They are selfish and overbearing, but also have tolerant and easy-going personalities.

Since they present themselves towards anyone in a familiar and playful manner, they are adored by their monster underlings. Having pleasure-seeking personalities, they like to enjoy themselves every day above all else. Other than that, they also enjoy entertaining others. "Ryugujo" have become places where those who live there can enjoy themselves without getting bored and have also been opened to the outside as amusement cities. Sometimes, they send messengers to the surface to invite humans.

In "ryugujo", guests are always welcome and drinking parties unfold day and night. Many monsters entertain guests, dancing beautifully, then bringing the fascinated men into their bedrooms. The otohime, who are at the center of these banquets, are outstanding dancers themselves. The sight of them dancing is so beautiful that it momentarily dazzles those who watch, making them forget the passing of time. Through dancing, the ostentatious exhibition of their sublime, powerful draconic form, as well as their womanly form, which is so graceful and beautiful that they might well be mistaken for celestial nymphs, compels observers to recognize them as beings which ought to be revered.

However, despite this sense of mystique given off by their appearance, as a matter of fact, they merely dance to entertain themselves as well as those who watch. Also, if there is a noteworthy man among those observing their dance, they'll bring him into their bedroom, as if to say their position as princess is irrelevant.

The men they desire as partners are companions who have the greatest reactions to what they do and won't bore them, such as men who thoroughly enjoy it when they decide to entertain them by taking them around ryugujo, which they are very proud of, and men who overreact to having their body teased. On the other hand, no matter how lacking and weak a man's responses may be, as he spends time with the otohime, which have a powerful charm as female creatures, eventually every little thing they do will drive him wild with lust. Sex with them is like a service to entertain the man, and he'll have a maximum reaction by releasing mana during their love-making, thus changing into an ideal husband to them.

Most men who visit ryugujo will end up choosing to live with monsters as their partners, however, there are also those who are intent on returning to the surface. Such men are given souvenirs known as "tamatebako". When a man opens the box, imbued with a spell by the otohime, magical smoke spills out and envelops him, showing him an illusion in which he can relive the paradise-like days at ryugujo. Furthermore, besides just re-experiencing the same things, he is also shown all the other ways to enjoy himself at ryugujo that he didn't get to experience during his visit, and if there is a monster who was really into him, it is said that he'll experience a simulation of the pleasure of sex with that monster that he still had yet to taste.

Because of this, the disparity between daily life and the paradise-like days at ryugujo will make him feel old, and he'll then long to visit ryugujo once again. Shortly thereafter, someone from ryugujo will once again appear to welcome him.

• Sahuagin Family • Aquatic Type

サハギン

Sahuagin

Habitat.....Rivers, marshes, etc. places near the waters' edge
Disposition.....Emotionless, meek
Diet.....Meat, fish, wild animals, etc.

Aquatic monsters that live near the shores of bodies of fresh water such as rivers and marshes. They're also called "hangyoin." They are hunters who use their webbed hands and feet to swim around freely, accurately subduing prey in the water. Normally, they're emotionless like fish, and they hardly ever speak, so reading their thoughts isn't an easy thing to do.

When a man they're fond of comes near the water's edge, they move through the water, silently creeping up to him, then quickly leaping out to attack and begin a sexual assault. Contrary to the weak impressions they give off, intercourse with them is very passionate and intense.

They appear to be mute and emotionless, but their love is revealed not through words or facial expressions, but through the sex itself. They express gratitude and fondness through cuddling and deep kissing, and when they want to express their love for a man, they push him down and jump right into sex without saying a word. From an outsider's perspective, it just looks like rape, but the wild sex is their greatest expression of love. In spite of their extremely quiet nature, they express their love for a man very frequently through kissing, fondling, and sex. As one can see, unlike their cold, silent exteriors, their interiors are actually hidden full of love and rich emotion.

Furthermore, while they're engaged in sex with the man they love their ordinarily emotionless expression undergoes an unbelievable change, revealing great ecstasy and rich emotion. Even though they don't talk too much ordinarily, during mating they naturally start to utter words of temptation and moan in ecstasy endlessly.

What looks like clothing that they are wearing is actually a part of their scales. These scales can be taken off or moved aside to make it convenient for having sex with a man. Occasionally, they molt, removing and discarding these scales. The shed scales can be worn as clothing, and there is a demand for them even among other monsters.

These tight-fitting clothes emphasize the lines of a girl's body no matter what her figure, glisten in an alluring manner when wet, and can easily allow for sex with a man just by moving them a bit to the side. It is not difficult to imagine why these clothes would be treasured by monsters.

• Scylla Family • Mollusc Type

スキュラ

Scylla

Habitat.....Ocean

Disposition.....Strong-willed

Diet.....Carnivorous, seafood etc.

A type of monster that lives in the ocean and has a lower body resembling octopus tentacles. Many individuals have personalities that are strong-willed, and a little bit ferocious. They attack ships traveling at sea, stealing food and men. They possess the ability to hide in tiny crevices which one wouldn't think they'd be able to fit in. While they have a strong side, they also have a cowardly nature as well. Because of this, when danger approaches they hide in those kinds of crevices. Also, they've been known to use such crevices as hiding places from which to launch sudden tentacle attacks on men who happen to be passing by, so be wary.

When they find a man who strikes their fancy, they manipulate their 8 tentacles to seize him and force intercourse for the purpose of bearing offspring. They love sticking their bodies all over men's bodies. In order to bring their bodies as close together as possible, they coil all of their tentacles around the man's body, sucking on him with their powerful suction cups and not letting go. Even after intercourse is finished, they don't necessarily separate from their men, and it's said that it isn't uncommon for them to spend a day joined together like this.

In spite of the bold disposition they possess, they're insecure and starving for affection. They love men so much that they feel uneasy unless they're clinging to a man. Their heart is at ease and they feel happiest when joined closely with a man, so they always have their wet tentacles crawling all over a man's body as if to beg for affection. After being pleased all over his body by them, a man will regain his liveliness, and then the scylla will resume sex again to join her body more deeply with that of the man.

They share the same environment with a monster called "Charybdis," and were even thought to be a set for some time. While ships are stopped by the whirling tides generated by charybdis, they take men away from the ships, and also go after men who were spat out by the charybdis.

Besides hanging out around charybdis nesting holes, they prefer lurking in small spaces, so they often go into charybdis nesting holes to seek shelter. For that reason, the scylla are extremely friendly towards the charybdis, however, the charybdis resent them for stealing the men they go after, and for suddenly sneaking into their nesting holes when they're right in the middle of having sex with their husbands.

• Mermaid Family • Fish Type

シー・ビショップ Sea Bishop

Habitat.....Ocean

Disposition.....Warm, devoted

Diet.....Omnivorous, seaweed, fish, shellfish and other seafood

A type of mermaid that lives in the ocean. From birth, they are priests who serve the god of the sea, "Poseidon." By borrowing the power of Poseidon, they can perform a special ritual in which they remake the body of a man to enable him to live in the sea (a man transformed in this manner becomes a being similar to an incubus (p.13)) .

Because of that ability, they're a necessary existence for all the monsters who live in the sea. Their race is the pillar of sea monster society. When unmarried they don't stay and live in one place. They travel, journeying through all the world's oceans. When they find a human and monster couple, they perform the ritual. At a glance, the ritual looks almost like a human marriage ceremony, but because of the need to constantly infuse the man with magical power, the couple will continually have intercourse right in front of the sea bishop during the ceremony.

They have gentle personalities unbecoming of a monster. They never initiate attacks on human men. Furthermore, they have gentle hearts and a love of people, so they save from drowning those who fall into the ocean whenever they can. If they were too late and a man was about to die from drowning, they would likely try to quickly perform the ritual and remake the man's body in order to save him. Of course sexual intercourse between a man and monster is necessary for it, but in this case, they won't hesitate to use their own body. They go as far as offering up their body in their attempts to save a man.

Most of the men who are saved like this are moved by their dedication, and choose to live together with them in the sea. In this way, they can obtain husbands even without assaulting men.

As written above, they are very unmonsterlike, but they are curious about sex, and have a wealth of knowledge from having watched many monsters have sex. Thus, once they start having sex, they exhibit strong lust like a monster, and they'll likely put it all to full use, using their beautiful bodies to enthrall a man.

As is the case with most monsters, it's almost impossible for them to go without having sex with their husband. After obtaining a husband, they'll be living together, so they'll end up settling down in a specific place, and then they will only perform the ritual in the ocean around there.

They strongly wish for more monsters and humans to be joined together. In the region where they settle down, many humans and monsters will be guided by their hands, and the number of married couples will increase dramatically.

• Mermaid Family • Beastman Type

セルキー

Selkie

Habitat.....Snowy region (in the sea and on land)

Disposition.....Strong, obstinate

Diet.....Carnivorous, mainly fish and wild animals

Dressed as if they were a cartoon mascot, these seal mermaids wrap their bodies in furs. They feed on fish and wild animals, and though a type of mermaid, they actively hunt on land, not just in the sea. The magical energy of these girls soaks into the pelts they wear, creating warmth that heats their whole bodies and allows them to live in freezing seas. They are also able to freely remove these furs, the body revealed being that of a beautiful human woman. When like this, selkies are difficult to tell apart from human women.

They normally exhibit firm behavior that is full of confidence, but since they are also stubborn by nature, they aren't aggressive about sex with human males. This is due to the warmth provided when wrapped in their furs. However, because of this, if a selkie needs to take off their furs, they become apprehensive and begin to feel lonely, the "chill" around them entering their bodies and minds. Eventually, due to the overwhelming "chill", they become unable to maintain their ordinary confidence and firmness, and their true nature, originally lonely and dying for affection, is revealed.

Even though they normally treat men with confident indifference, when their furs are off it's another story. Unable to bear the "chill", they will seek sex in order to gain the warmth of a man. For that reason, one must be careful around them when their furs are off. They remove their furs for long periods of time in order to mend them periodically, but one shouldn't approach them during such times. Also, their furs may slip off or get torn in the middle of hunting, so it's not uncommon for the prey to switch from a wild animal to a human man out of nowhere.

After they have felt the warmth of a human male even once, even when in their furs and not feeling the "chill" they will still prefer and seek out the warmth of a human man. Additionally, those who happen to have a husband will become miserable and helpless if not embraced in the arms of their beloved husband, and they will come to desire to always be enveloped in their husband's warmth. By pure instinct they will fawn on their husband and beg for sex, and have him pour sweet warmth directly inside them that soothes their body and heart.

The furs they cover themselves in also, magically, become flush with their skin and move and respond as if they'd become part of their body. It's also possible for them to share furs with their husband, and many couples even stay together in the furs whether it is day or night. It's to protect their husband from the cold, er, rather to allow themselves to always be in the embrace of their husband's arms.

Not only do they use the furs as a sleeping bag at night, they also have their husband hold them tight inside the furs even while hunting during the day, so it's like they're "wearing" him. There are even couples that stay joined together inside the furs whether day or night.

• Turtle Family • Aquatic Type

海和尚 (ウミオショウ)

Umi Osho

Habitat.....Zipangu region (sea)

Disposition.....Timid, devoted

Diet.....Omnivorous: seaweed and crustaceans, etc.

A monster with a large turtle shell on its back that inhabits the seas of Zipangu. Having meek and timid personalities, not only do they not attack humans, it is said that sometimes they are so astonished when they come across a human that they hide in their shells, refusing to come out.

Like "sea bishops", they are priestesses who serve the sea god, and they can perform the ritual to remake the bodies of human men who are joined with monsters of the sea, enabling them to live in the sea. Due to this ability and their honest and simple nature, they are loved by the monsters of the sea.

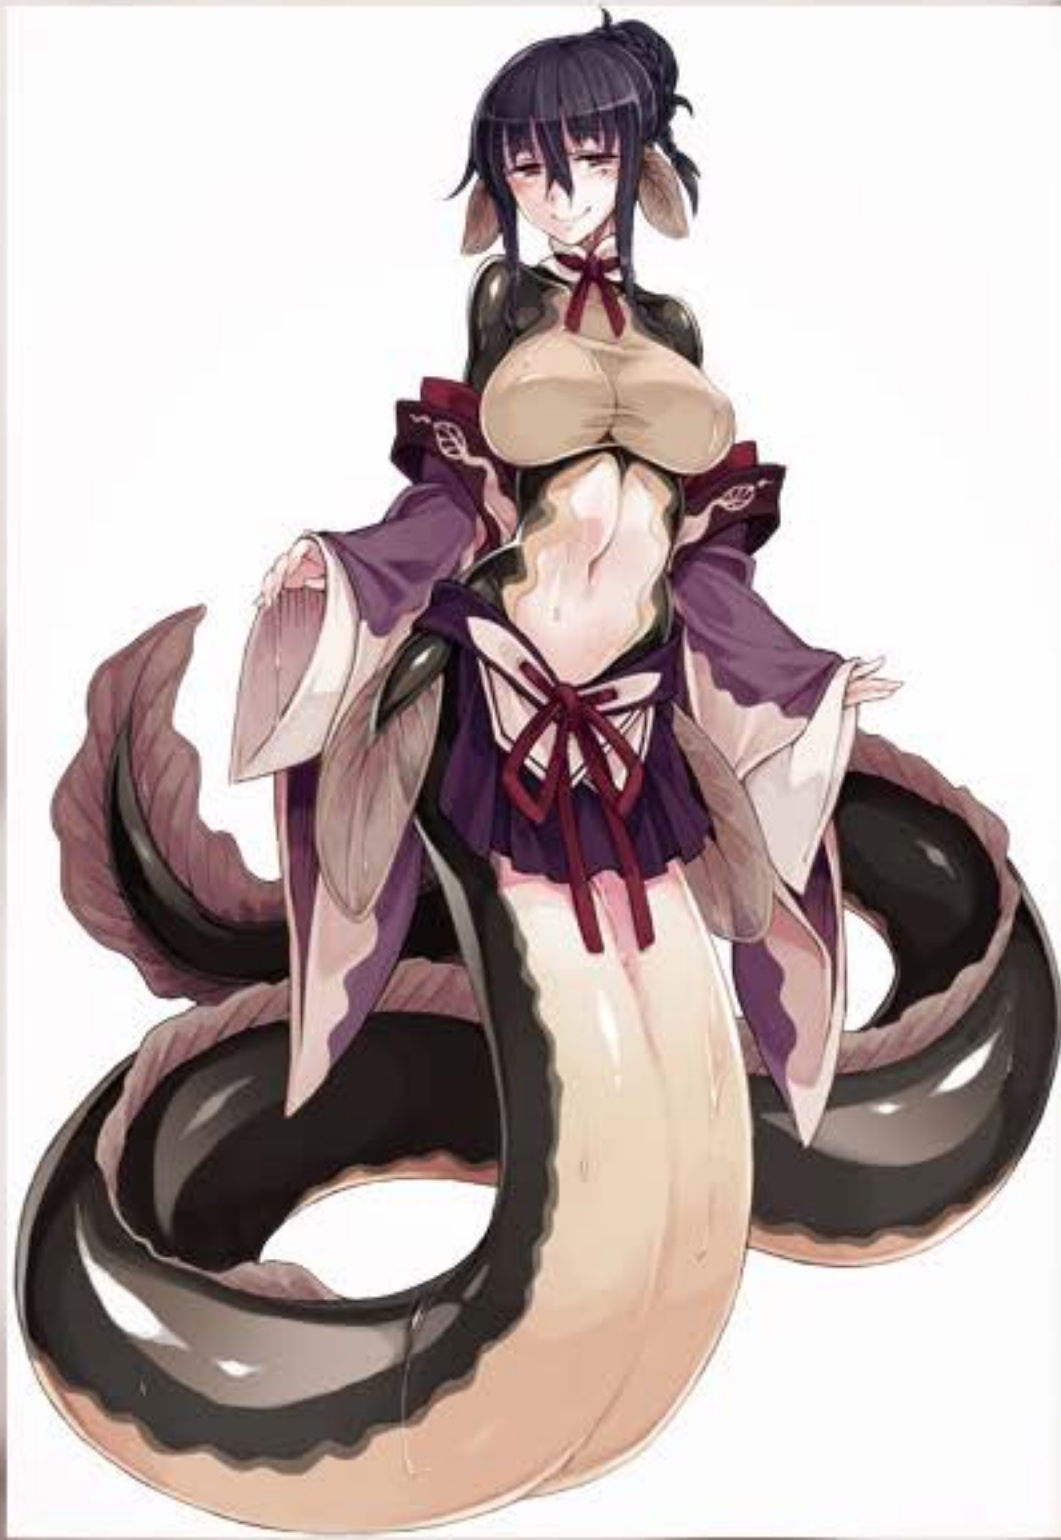

They themselves are quite harmless beings, but if someone were to try and harm them, he would surely be dragged under the water by the monsters of the sea in a fit of rage, or, in some cases, by storms and billows caused by the sea god. And then, the man would end up being swarmed by the monsters and violated, but the umi osho herself would disregard it as if nothing had happened, despite possibly having been harmed, and she would bless the union of the man and a monster, the birth of a new married couple, from the bottom of her heart, performing the ritual to enable him to live under the sea.

They hesitate to even speak to men in a seductive manner, let alone attack them, yet their true nature is monstrous, and they eagerly anticipate being joined with human men. Also, as a race, they have strong masochistic feelings. Longing to be pursued by a man so fiercely that it is overbearing and violent, to receive his raging lust in their body, for these things they pray to the sea god day after day. Perhaps due to a blessing resulting from their fervent prayer and their original cultivation, their ordinary speech and behavior irresistibly provokes sadistic feelings in men.

Perhaps because they mostly have petite bodies in general and carry disproportionately large and heavy shells, should they fall over for some reason, they aren't quite able to get back up. It is said that when seen in this manner, they experience agonizing shame, and they look so pitifully adorable and defenseless that it easily makes a man's sadistic feelings run wild; a man would take advantage of their inability to resist and violate them according to his desire.

Even when being violated, they retain their modest attitude, and rather than indulging in pleasure, it's more like they devotedly offer themselves to a man to quell his rage in a manner befitting of an adherent of the sea god. However, their true nature as a monster can be briefly glimpsed from the way they move their hips, and when taking a meat rod, they clamp down firmly, greedily refusing to let go, spurring a man to push deeper and deeper inside. Their mouth is just as greedy as their lower parts, and it is said that once they take a penis inside, they'll keep sucking without letting go until he's all out of semen. Also, it seems that they will experience great joy and ecstasy on this occasion if a man puts his hands on their head and presses it down, and their fellatio will become much more lewd and alluring, or something like that.

Additionally, they're guides to "Ryugujo", which also serves as the sea god's shrine, and they have been granted the power to enable even men who aren't married to sea monsters to temporarily breathe under the sea. Ryugujo exists at the bottom of the sea, and it's a place described as one of this world's paradises, where guests can expect dream-like hospitality. Of course, men that strike their fancy will be invited, but other human men are also invited according to requests by the monsters of the sea.

• Mermaid Family • Mermaid Type

鰻女郎

(ウナギジョロウ)

Unagi joro

Habitat.....Zipangu region (near large ponds, lakes, and rivers, etc.)

Disposition.....Calm, devoted, lustful

Diet.....Carnivorous: seafood, etc.

A type of mermaid living in the Zipangu region. They have the body of a long slender fish covered in a mucus membrane. The slimy mucus secreted from their body contains many compounds that restore vitality and stamina, and since they themselves have it inside their own body, their body is also full of an unmanageable amount of stamina and lust.

Normally, their lascivious true nature is masked by a soft and gentle demeanor, and a devoted appearance befitting of a race of Zipangu, but their unconcealable charm oozes out from bits of their speech, the way their body wriggles whenever they move, and their posture. They don't directly seduce men, but nevertheless, because of their appearance, they're good at getting men in the mood, and in most cases, men will be eager to seize their heart.

Their body is covered in a mucus membrane to protect them from desiccation. When wrapped in this slippery body, even if one tries to grab their body and pull them off, one can't get a good grip. They can adjust the state of the sliminess of the mucus membrane at will, and without the slime, it makes it easier to grab them. On the other hand, they can also make those who touch them slip to the degree that they want. The hands of men that try to touch them slip in the slime, with the extra momentum causing them to touch their breasts or genital area. When a man panics and twists his body in an attempt to get away, he'll slip even more, pressing against and knocking down their soft body.

By the time he becomes aware of it, not only will her body be coiled around him, the man's four limbs will also be wrapped around the girl. Even if it should just be a casual touch, one will end up entangled and locked in a grapple with them.

In this way, they don't just seize a man's heart, they seize his body using their mucus and create a situation where he can and will make a move on them. Before they know it, men who strike their fancy will find their body and heart seized in this manner and gradually end up having sex with them.

Their soft body has just the right resilience, and being covered in it feels pleasant. It's as if a man's penis will melt when having sex wrapped in their body. During sex, a man is made to drink mucus transferred mouth-to-mouth, and mucus coils around his penis with wet sticky noises, continuously restoring his vitality and stamina. No matter how much they have sex, they never get exhausted, and the more they have sex, the more his stamina increases. A man will come to desire to keep having longer and more intense sex with them.

Those who have a husband expose their lascivious true nature and desire to service their husband with their own body. Due to their devoted nature, they make good wives who pour their heart into taking care of their husband, but the home-cooked meals they make every day always have their mucus mixed in. It's highly nutritious with a rich flavor which will appeal to their husband's tastes, and continuing to eat the food every day will build up his stamina to the point that he will always have an excessive amount of vitality and stamina, and when their husband wants sex at every opportunity, they will gleefully accept it.

Since he can get energy from having sex with them, even if the husband does have a job, he'll develop a habit of having sex with them until they're stained cloudy white after eating breakfast, before heading off to work.

• Spirit Family • Elemental Type

ウンディーネ Undine

Habitat.....Lakes, springs, ect.

Disposition.....Calm, devoted

Diet.....Human men's mana

Water elementals born from concentrated "water elements" that were corrupted by mamono mana and became "monsterized elementals." They are monsters that have beautiful bodies that are translucent like the water they are made of, and have a pure, kind heart with a gentle disposition. Normally they dwell near sources of water like lakes and springs, and they seldom attack humans.

However, they are always seeking a human man to become their covenanter and share love with, and although they won't attack, if a man strikes their fancy, they'll actively seduce him into becoming their covenanter and having sex with them. Water elementals intrinsically have a strong yearning towards the love shared by men and women, and the mamono mana within them converts that yearning into powerful desire; to them and to monsters, that is love, and it drives them to have vigorous sex with human men.

They always snuggle up to their covenanter, adoring him like a lover. By having sex, they offer him the power of water, and through devoted service, they offer him pleasure. Their body, which is made of water, gently envelops the covenanter's penis, and one can experience a gentle pleasure that is unlike anything that can be experienced with another monster. Along with the strong pleasure, a man will attain serenity while being enveloped by them, as if their devoted and gentle heart had reached him. And then, when semen is released inside their translucent body, it'll float for a while, and they'll ecstatically delight in the fact that their beloved covenanter's semen is there inside their body.

When a covenanter charmed by them continually provides them with mana, eventually they'll transform into a "dark elemental" which is dominated by mamono mana.

Just as water gets muddy, their once pure hearts become impure with pleasure and undergo a dramatic transformation, becoming lascivious and lustful. Sex with their covenanter also changes, becoming violent like a muddy stream; their covenanter's rational mind will be gulped down along with his mana.

Being water elementals, when they are corrupted by the dark element, it's the same as the waters of the natural world being corrupted by the dark element. Their water jugs are originally full of pure, sacred water with no stagnation, but as they become completely clouded with mamono mana, so too does the water in the jug become murky, being blended with mamono mana. The water flows out into the waters of the natural world. As for humans who drink this water corrupted by mamono mana, if it is a man, then he transforms into an incubus, and if it is a woman, then she gradually transforms into a succubus. If the water is drunk by a monster, she is empowered, and able to have even wilder sex with men. In this way, not only the water, but the entire land becomes eroded by the dark element, gradually changing into a mamono realm.

Additionally, they have an extremely difficult time dealing with verbal abuse from their covenanter. If they hear even a little bit of this, they'll become afraid of being hated by their covenanter. Afterwards, they'll have wild, frenetic sex with him as though their ordinary gentle personality was a lie. They provide thorough service in order to make the covenanter love them again. They try to imprison a man's body and heart through sheer pleasure.