

• Arachne Family • Bug Type

アントアラクネ Ant Arachne

Habitat.....Caves, plains, forests etc. underground

Disposition.....Lustful, strong-willed

Diet.....Remains of dead animals, husks, etc.

A small bug type monster of the arachne family, it bears a remarkably close resemblance to the "Giant Ant." This mimicry serves to fool the giant ants into thinking the "Ant Arachne" is one of their own kind. The arachne take advantage of this by mixing in with groups of giant ants and moving into their nests. Despite their resemblance to the giant ants, their disposition is very different, being quite ferocious in nature.

As for food, they eat what the giant ants gather, and they hardly ever leave the nest, so one rarely encounters them above ground. They obtain a man as a reproductive partner in much the same way. When the giant ants bring a man back to the nest, they'll seize the man and carry him back to their own bed. Being exposed to the giant ant pheromones that pervade the nest makes them highly aroused and extremely lustful. They join with a man after binding his four limbs with the thread they spit out, and they like to firmly seize the man's hips with their arms and all their legs before slamming their own hips into him.

It's not over after the man ejaculates. They're constantly exposed to pheromones, and they won't be satisfied just having sex once or twice in a row. They enjoy pleasure and milking semen by having sex again and again and slamming their hips together for as long as they like. They can't release pheromones like giant ants can, but the ant's pheromones stick thoroughly to them, and when a man sees the obscene effect it has on them, it will likely be impossible to suppress his desire.

Unlike giant ants, they don't work all day. After capturing a man they have a lazy lifestyle, having sex with the man in their bed all day and night. The reason they have no need to work is that the men who become their husbands are the same as them. They rapidly grow corrupt along with them, and eventually the priority in their head will be thoughts of having sex with them.

ARACHNE

• Arachne Family • Bug Type

Habitat.....Caves, forests

Disposition.....Bold, ferocious, lustful

Diet.....Omnivorous, wild animals, etc.

A bug type monster with the lower body of a spider that dwells in dark places such as caves and deep within forests. They have high intelligence, but most of them are lustful and belligerent. Since they have high physical abilities, they are very dangerous creatures.

They make sticky thread inside their body, and use it to make a net-like web. These webs function as traps for seizing prey. Animals and people that touch it without realizing it get stuck due to the adhesive power, and become unable to move. Of course they aggressively attack trapped prey and other prey, seeking to wrap it in threads and capture it.

In the case that the prey captured is a human man, they'll attempt a sexual assault for the purpose of procreation. It is said that these sadistic monsters obtain unbearable pleasure and happiness from one-sidedly raping and pleasuring men who can't move due to the threads when they make them gasp.

Furthermore, the more a man tries to resist, and the more rebellious a man is, the stronger it stimulates their sadistic nature. As their desire intensifies, they give the man rougher sex and even more intense pleasure. If caught by them, it's best to just sit there and do nothing without trying to run. That way, there's a higher likelihood of being released.

If a guy strikes their fancy, they'll continue to keep him bound in their web even afterward, and he'll have to keep being with these lustful, indulgent monsters. If a stubborn man decides not to show any reaction after ending up in that situation, then they'll give him even greater pleasure to make him moan submissively. It's all in vain once a man meekly accepts it, because the sex with her will just keep growing infinitely wilder in pursuit of even greater pleasure.

Their main body and threads are weak to fire. For that reason, it's possible to avoid them and their webs to a certain degree if one carries something such as a torch.

Surprisingly, they're proficient in sewing, and they sometimes give clothes to men they like. However, to them, what it means is "be mine." If one accepts, he'll be bound, and he'll have to keep having sex with them as their husband, regardless of consent. The fine and beautiful clothing that they make is even regarded as first-class goods by humans, and it fetches a high price due to the danger that accompanies arachnes as well.

Even among the monsters, the demand for their fine clothing is high, as there are designs that incite men's lust, and no matter how thick it is, they can still taste pleasure from being fondled over the clothing.

• Arachne Family • Bug Type

アトラク=ナクア Atlach-Nacha

Habitat.....Caves, underground
Disposition.....Strong-willed, ill-tempered
Diet.....Omnivorous: wild animals etc.

A variety of abyssal monster that lurks deep underground where light doesn't reach. The illustration depicts a married individual, and an unmarried individual would appear like a female that gives a sharp impression with only four spider legs growing on her back. They do not stray outside their own territory and are focused intently on continuously building a spiderweb ad infinitum, but sometimes, human men who will become their prey show up underground, as if lured by something, and finally manage to reach them.

The venom that flows inside their body adversely affects even their own spirit, making them depressed, and so they are constantly irritated. For that reason, when a man with a peculiar mentality is sexually aroused by their appearance, as if to vent their irritation, they react in a manner unbecoming of a monster and hurl abusive language at him such as "lowest scum", and will attempt to bite and inject him with venom. The effect of the venom in a man doesn't cause irritation, instead it incites wicked carnal desire towards the little girl in front of him. A man's spirit will become depressed, and a change will come over him so that he'll have no qualms about shutting them up by screwing his penis inside their mouth, the source of the abusive language, or pinning them down on the ground and violating their tiny body according to his own desire.

While having sex with them like that, the man will experience a burning sensation inside his own body, and before he knows it, he'll have changed from human form into an ominous huge spider form. The huge spider has a reproductive pouch with countless wiggling tentacles around the bottom of his cephalon; furthermore, he will make the foul-mouthed little girl's body sink inside there and cover her in tentacles. All of the tentacles are endowed with erotic sensitivity and a sense of taste to relish her body, and semen will be released from every one of them to impregnate her; they will be screwed inside every single one of her orifices, and her whole body will be completely stained cloudy white.

Additionally, irritated by her insults, the huge spider will bite her body, and directly inject a bodily fluid through his fangs that contains a high concentration of the man's mana which will mix with her blood and violate her body from the inside, continuously providing her with irresistible pleasure; she'll convulse, constantly climaxing over and over, and each additional thrust of a tentacle will yield yet another climax. During this, her abusive voice will fall silent, and instead, she'll just keep uttering sweet words and apologies for her insults. This is because she is expressing her original personality after having the venom that was adversely affecting her spirit neutralized by the man's mana. Only when their body is filled with their husband's mana is their heart able to feel at ease. When their husband's mana that was poured inside their body weakens, and their venom gets stronger, they'll once again hurl severe insults at their husband, inciting him to bite and violate them again.

Once they've obtained a husband who serves as half of their own body in this manner, they constantly spend their time inside the reproductive pouch, absorbed in the work of expanding the couple's love nest by earnestly spinning thread while having intercourse with their husband. It's said that as long as this is not interrupted, they won't take any interest in any person other than their husband.

There's a legend that says when this web is completed, the world will enter a time of destruction, but according to another theory, the web is a giant magic circle, and when complete, the entire surface area existing above it will be transformed into an abyssal mamono realm, and all the humans will transform into their minions.

BEELZEBUB

• Fly Family • Bug Type

Habitat.....Mamono realms

Disposition.....Ferocious, selfish, lustful

Diet.....Omnivorous, eats anything. Most prefers human semen, saliva, sweat, etc.

A bug type monster also referred to as "lord of the flies". Their body is small, but they possess tremendous magical energy, and they fly around the sky at high speeds using the wings on their back. They're also called "lord of gluttony", and their lust and appetite are extremely ravenous. They're dangerous monsters. Whenever they see food, they devour it all, and whenever they see a human man, they attack and try to forcibly have sex.

They're capable of eating anything, but what they most prefer is the sweat, saliva, and semen of humans. To them, human men are a treat that is prioritized above all else. If there's a man in front of them, they'll thoroughly lick up the sweat all over his body, thrust their tongue in his mouth and greedily slurp his saliva, and suck his penis, gulping down the semen resulting from the ejaculation induced, all with an ecstatic expression.

They're so ravenous as to be regarded as lords of gluttony, so of course they aren't satisfied just by having sex once. If they take a liking to a man, they'll stay in the area, flying around him, frequently attacking the man in pursuit of sex.

In this way, they are extremely dangerous monsters, but they're also symbolic of a bountiful harvest. Once they've taken a liking to someone, no matter how much food is devoured by them, even more food and wealth will be accumulated. And no matter how much one has sex with them and releases semen, he'll never run out of stamina and lust, and he'll instead become able to fire even more semen at them.

They're extremely selfish, and they eat when they feel like eating, and attack men when they feel like attacking. Even if one objects to what they're doing, they generally won't listen at all, and instead, you'll be pushed down on the spot, and deliciously devoured.

Since they're drawn by the scent of food scraps and the odor of human sweat, etc. if you don't wish to be attacked, you'd best keep yourself and your surroundings clean. The odor of sweat which is normally regarded as foul is the fragrance of the greatest treat to them. It does none other than stimulate their brain and lower body, igniting their desire.

DEVIL BUG

• Devil Bug Family • Bug Type

Habitat.....Indoors, caves
Disposition.....Simple, lustful
Diet.....Anything edible

An insect monster known as "devil bug" that has existed since ancient times. They prefer dark, damp places, and aside from dwelling in caves and the like, they also often sneak into such places as warehouses and human dwellings unnoticed, living under the floor, in the attic etc. Their bodies are supposed to be right around the same size as a human girl, yet it's said that they're able to invade even small homes and settle down without the residents being aware of it.

While they are intelligent enough to use language, they're almost completely irrational, and their behavior is directed by instincts such as hunger and lust. What they concern themselves with is eating or having sex with a human man. They can acutely sense the odor of human men and mana, and their body is always burning hotly with the urge to mate. They crawl around excitedly seeking human men.

As soon as they spot a human man, their eyes become fixated on only him. Their hotly flushing body will be more than ready enough, so they'll swiftly leap at a man, attack, and attempt to copulate with him as soon as possible.

They always live in a group, and it is said that if there's one, there must be thirty in the same place. For that reason, once an individual that has captured a man begins having sex with him, they'll soon sniff out the thick odor, and then a great many devil bugs will appear, and the man will end up being surrounded and violated by all the extremely aroused bugs.

Once that happens, they won't let him go until he passes out. They'll continue to use his body to console themselves meanwhile, and when he later wakes up, the devil bugs will be overjoyed, and they'll attack and copulate with him once more.

Even if there's no man in the house, just sniffing the barely lingering scent of a man is enough to put them in a state of lustful frenzy. In the case that they are unable to have sex with a man, they'll either masturbate while going around looking for a man, or go at it among themselves until they become covered in one another's love juices. Even among all monsters, they have especially little concern for the father-daughter relationship. Once a child has grown to a certain degree, she'll no longer be able to see her father as anything other than a man. When her body gets hot for her father, she'll obey it, and attack without any regard for the fact that it's her own father.

Aside from the scent of human mana, they're also attracted to the lingering odor of sweat, filth, and more, so the filthier the home environment is, the easier it is for them to settle there. If you don't want to be attacked by them, I recommend keeping your body and room clean.

GIANT ANT

• Ant Family • Bug Type

Habitat.....Caves, plains, forests, etc. Underground

Disposition.....Honest, diligent

Diet.....Dead animal remains, grains etc.

A type of insect monster that lives in a group focused around a queen. They dig holes in plains and caves, making a huge nest. Despite their small bodies, they possess a frightening amount of strength. They can easily lift and carry objects much larger than themselves, and they can even dig straight through solid rock.

Besides the queen, the rest of them are called "workers." They perform a variety of tasks including defending the nest, procurement of food, and expansion of tunnels. During the daytime, most of them wander aboveground in search of food. When they move aboveground they trace their own paths with pheromones. Others follow the trail, and they form a huge procession, marching in perfect unison, and even giant ants that move a bit away from the procession in search of food can return in no time at all.

Not only do these pheromones act as path markers, they also effectively serve as an attractant to men. Men entranced by the pheromones will join the procession, and disappear into the nest. The ants find a man they like among the men who have entered the nest in this way and take him to bed.

They are extremely hard workers. They wake up early in the morning and start their jobs immediately. Throughout the day they work diligently. Because their levels of sexual desire swell with fatigue, by the time they make it back to the nest they assault the men they have taken away and initiate sexual intercourse. Their sweat contains pheromones, and when they come home exhausted, the swetier they are, the more aroused they become, and that's not all. When men are showered in lots of these pheromones that give off a thick female odor, they become so unbearably aroused that there's probably not a man who could refuse them.

Normally the workers have no reproductive capacity, but individuals who have frequently coupled with men have this latent ability awakened. In such circumstances, the individual will leave the nest with her lover and form a new group and nest, becoming a new queen.

Just after becoming a queen, her lust will become especially high, and she'll give birth to many children in order to increase the number of worker ants. The job of the man brought with her is to impregnate her with numerous children as her husband, so they'll end up constantly having sex to accomplish this.

By having sex, the queen's body becomes much hotter than even normally, and she'll release a huge amount of sweat, so a huge amount of pheromones hang in the air of the queen's bedroom. The queen herself and her man will continue to be constantly aroused, and it is often the case that they will have sex all day long.

Girtablilu

• Arachne Family • Bug Type

Habitat.....Desert region
Disposition.....Strong-willed, calm, violent, lustful
Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals, etc.

A kind of arachne that lives in the desert. Its lower body resembles that of a scorpion, and it has a giant venomous stinger on its tail. It is called "the assassin of the desert." Even among the monsters that live in the desert region, it is feared as being especially violent and dangerous.

When they find a man that strikes their fancy, just as their name "assassin" would suggest, they approach the man without making a sound and swiftly stab the stinger into him to inject him with venom. Out of all the monsters, the venom they possess is by far the most potent. It is an instant-reaction venom that causes paralysis immediately upon entry into the bloodstream, plus it attacks the entire body with heat, especially the lower body, bringing about sexual desire. Furthermore, it forces a man's body to produce a high volume of semen, and makes his penis hard and swollen.

With the man paralyzed, they take him back to their own dwelling and continue to have intercourse to bear young. Since they continue to inject a man with venom during sex, he never runs out of semen throughout the whole act, and neither does he lose his erection. Because of that, they likely won't stop mating until either she becomes satisfied, or he passes out.

After experiencing this a number of times, the man's penis will grow harder, thicker, and larger as he is injected again and again with the venom, and it'll become able to slip deeper inside her. The arousal and pleasure caused by the venom never dulls. On the contrary, the more a man is stung, the more the intensity of the resulting pleasure increases.

Furthermore, they are very sadistic in nature; since they get such pleasure out of it, they'll probably keep fiercely injecting the man with venom during sex even if he is willing. Also, how much their sadistic nature reveals itself is proportional to how much they actually care about the man they're with. So when they're with a man they like, they start frequently stabbing him with the stinger as an "expression of affection," and will likely end up ravishing him more frequently and furiously.

As for the body of a man who's been frequently injected with their venom, eventually even his nerves will be violated and changed by the venom. The body will change so that being pierced by the stinger and injected with the venom will be processed as potent pleasure rather than pain. Even if venom isn't injected, just being touched by them will be enough to make the penis swell up so stiffly and hugely that it's painful, and the man's breathing will grow rough as he anticipates being ravished by them.

Even though they are called "assassins," in the same way as other monsters, they won't actually take a person's life. No one ever dies from their venom. But a man caught by one of them cannot easily escape, and they generally end up living together, so in actuality it's certainly difficult for him to ever return alive to the human settlements.

• Worm Family • Bug Type

グリーンワーム Greenworm

Habitat.....Plains, forests

Disposition.....Simple, gentle

Diet.....Herbivorous: fruits and vegetables, etc.

A caterpillar monster with a soft, squishy green body that is the larval form of the butterfly monster "papillon". They are a docile race with low intelligence and move slowly, but when danger approaches, a strange smelling secretion which causes those who get a whiff to feel exhausted trickles out from the antennae on top of their head, neutralizing enemies.

This race has a form specialized for "feeding" to obtain the large amount of nourishment necessary for maturation into an imago. When these persistently voracious girls spot edible fruits and vegetables, they go into a relentless munching frenzy as if their ordinary leisurely state were a lie and will even become engrossed and keep eating all day long. On the other hand, even if they were to spot a man who strikes their fancy, the most they'd do is climb up a man's body and try to cling, so these monsters are basically hardly dangerous at all.

However, as they head towards the goal of maturation into an imago, changes occur in the nature of individuals with sufficient stores of nourishment. Their interest in men increases exponentially, and at the same time the odor of the secretion from their antennae also changes to be enticing to men. It consists of a mixture of the secretion they had to begin with and the fragrance of all the fruits and vegetables consumed up to that point, so the secretion of individuals who preferentially fed on mamono realm produce in particular has an extra strong and sweet fragrance which will attract men even more strongly. After wrestling a man lured near them by this, they take his penis deep inside the vagina equipped on their lower abdomen. In this joined state, they make a shell around them with their solidified secretion, shutting themselves inside with the man and entering a "chrysalis" state.

Even after the target of their appetite changes from food to the man, it remains as voracious as ever, and they will be constantly joined together with the man, copulating nonstop inside the cradle-like chrysalis. Their body, which is specialized precisely for this moment of "feeding", is a soft, squishy lump of flesh that applies pressure to the penis being held deep inside. They repeatedly contract their body like when a caterpillar crawls on the ground, providing endless pleasure and continuously milking semen.

Additionally, it is said that they make the man drink their own secretion via mouth to mouth feeding during copulation. This secretion is condensed with the nutrition that they had continued to store up until entering the chrysalis, and it serves as food for the man while living inside the chrysalis. It sustains his life and keeps his body healthy, while also giving him the energy and stamina to continue copulating without getting worn out. Moreover, the effect that causes exhaustion upon smelling it also remains, and every time the man takes in the odor, his lower body will lose strength, and he'll sloppily ejaculate inside them.

After entering a "chrysalis", they spend their time inside it transforming their body into an imago. By doing this while being satisfied by their husband's semen, they construct the optimum adult body for being impregnated by their husband and at the same time instill their husband with expert knowledge of their body. While spending their time copulating inside the chrysalis like this, they grow into a beautiful "papillon" and achieve eclosion together with their imprisoned husband.

Honey Bee

• Bee Family • Bug Type

Habitat.....Plains, forests

Disposition.....Warm, gentle

Diet.....Flower nectar, alraune nectar

Bug type monsters that make an enormous hive and live in groups centered around a queen bee.

The honey bees whose role is to gather nectar from flowers and alraune for food are called worker bees. Other than looking for food, if the queen bee doesn't have a husband, they also have a duty to look for a human man to become the queen's husband. When they spot a valuable human man, they fly at him and have sex with him to check whether or not he'd be a suitable husband for the queen.

Men they like are taken back to the nest as candidates for the queen's husband. A man the queen takes a liking to will then become her husband, but those unselected will be taken into possession by the worker bees that brought them in.

Although the worker bees are incapable of reproduction, they're still monsters, and they strongly desire to have sex with men, so they won't release a man they like that they brought back themselves. Men who become their possessions are taken back to their own rooms that exist within the hive. Every night after finishing work, they have sex with the man, and enjoy a sweet time.

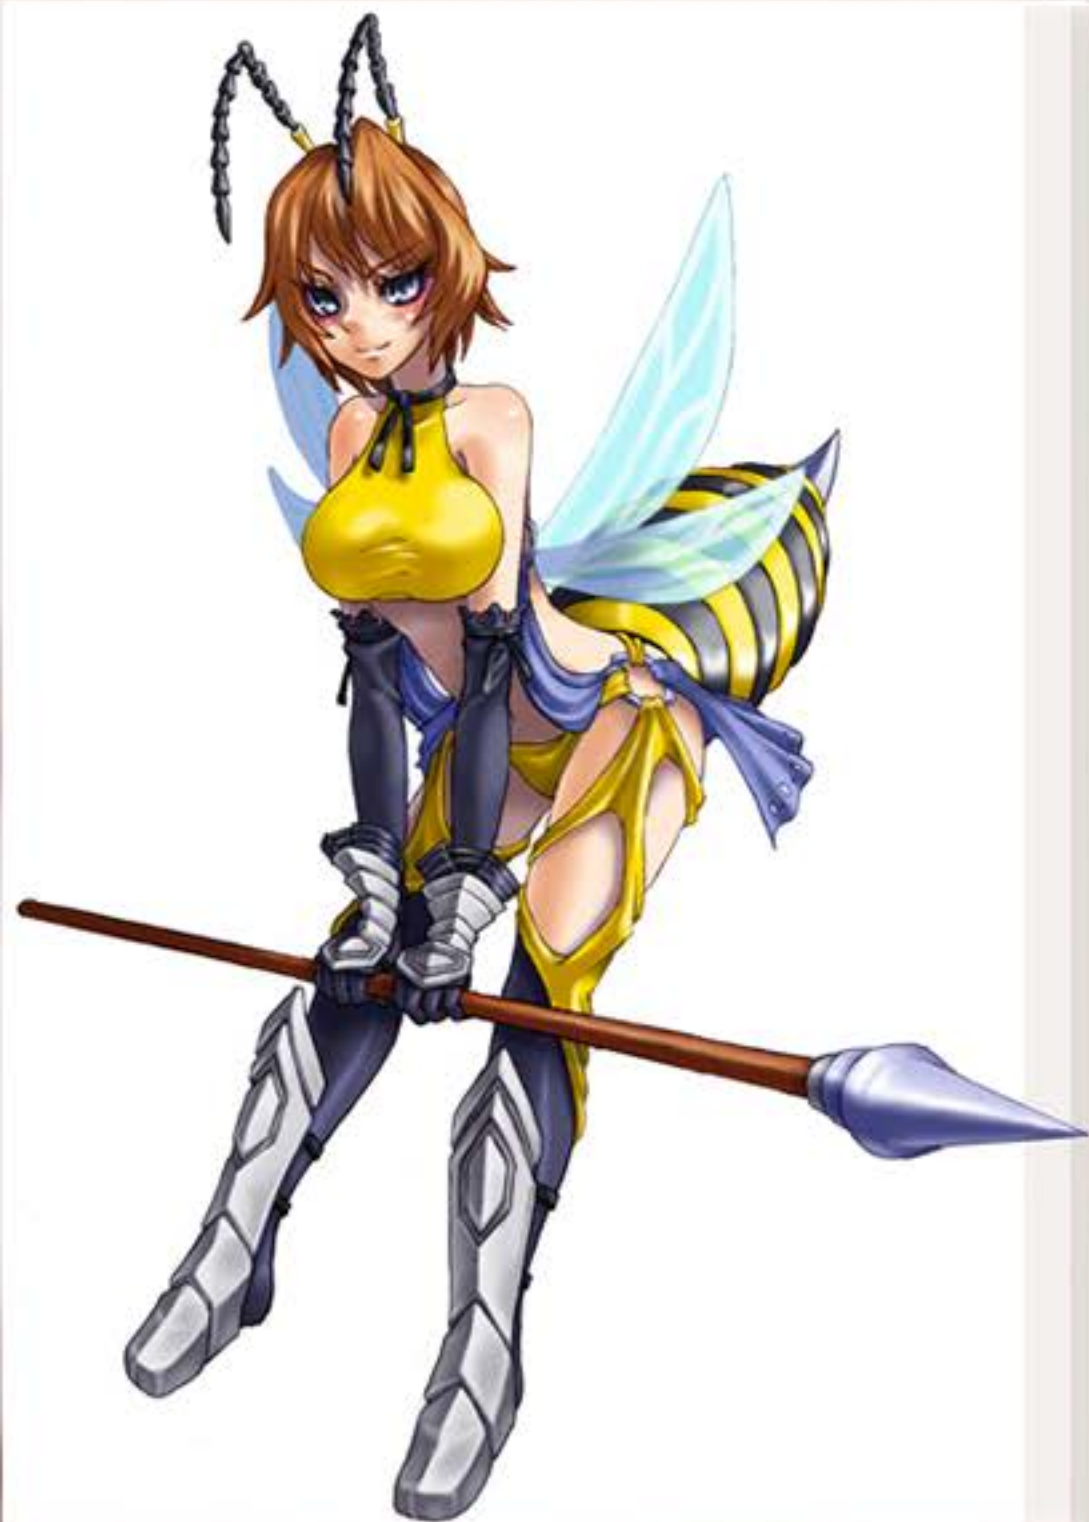

They also continue searching for a husband for the queen bee even after the queen bee already has a husband. In fact, since captured men unselected by the queen then become the property of the worker bees, they start working even more actively than before.

They strongly prefer nectar collected from alraune over nectar collected from normal flowers. This nectar is a powerful aphrodisiac that also has the effect of greatly increasing stamina, so they like to paint it all over their partner's body before having sex with a man, and pour it into his body through kissing. Also, they periodically rub it thoroughly into their own body for personal care. Through this, they change their own body to be more charming and alluring to men, as well as lewdly sensitive to pleasure.

Furthermore their body gives off the faint, sweet scent of this nectar. Besides their sweet disposition and the great sex, this sweet scent is what makes them irresistible to men. Additionally, this nectar is also used as food for the queen. Those who will be future queens do not sip normal flower nectar at all. From the time they are very young, they're raised solely on alraune nectar, so they become even more lewd and lustful, and the sweet scent they release attracts men even more strongly.

They're sometimes attacked by hornets (p. 44), the natural enemy of the hive, and grizzlies (p.46), who come after the stored up, ripened alraune nectar. In these cases, they fly at them all at once as a group, and carry them into the hive. Those carried into the hive are immersed in nectar and pleasure by a huge number of honey bees. Eventually, even the ferocious hornets are changed to have a sweet, lewd, honey bee and human man-loving personality like the honey bees, and just like the honey bees, they'll start to take men into their nest and live with them.

Hornet

• Bee Family • Bug Type

Habitat.....Forests

Disposition.....Ferocious, bold

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals, insects, etc.

Large bug type monsters, even among the bee family. Just like other bee family monsters they make nests and live in groups centered around a queen.

Even for members of the bee family, their disposition is extremely ferocious, and they fly around in search of prey and human men throughout the day. When they spot prey, they stop its movements with their spears which are painted with paralyzing poison, and then take them back to their nest.

Additionally, the stinger on their abdomen can be used to inject a lewd venom that incites sexual arousal in human men. Perhaps because they've always got this lewd venom stored in their abdomen, they're often unbearably horny, and they're dying to rape a human man. For that reason, when they spot a human man, they gleefully fly at him, and after stopping his movement with paralyzing poison, they inject him with the lewd venom from the stinger on their abdomen, capturing the man with these two venoms. And then, with a man in sight, in order to soothe their even more violently throbbing body, they rape the man thoroughly until satisfied.

After that, once they've had their fill, in the case that the queen is unmarried, the man will be taken back to the nest as a candidate. A man luckily chosen by the queen will get to spend his life being violated by the queen every day, but the ownership of men not chosen as her husband transfers to the workers that brought the men in. It brings joy to their hearts when a man they've violated thoroughly enough to remember the taste of his mana becomes their own. When they think about being able to spend every day violating the man, it makes their body tremble with anticipation and happiness. Naturally, they then take the man to the personal room given to them, and release their happiness and anticipation by crashing into the man's body with all their strength.

Furthermore, in the case that the queen has a husband, there's no longer any need for them to bring back men, but in that case, they can just skip the whole selection process and do as they please with the men they capture. For that reason, their search for men becomes even more active.

Also, they get along badly with "honey bees (p.42)" from the same bee family, and they can often be seen fighting over the same men. One on one, the hornets are stronger than honey bees by far and there's no way they'd lose, but when honey bees come in large numbers, they get pinned down. After having their entire body covered in alraune nectar, and getting teased all over their body, the pleasure brought about is so intense that they become unable to do anything to fight back.

Hornets who have had that happen to them are then brought into the honey bee's hive, and there they continue to be immersed in even more nectar and pleasure, and they're made to thoroughly savor the sweet pleasure of honey bees. In this way, honey bees change hornets to have a gentle personality preferring sweet sex with men almost like a honey bee. These hornets eat alraune nectar with the honey bees and maintain their body. On top of this, since they've become gentle, they no longer inject men with lewd venom, and it starts to violate their own body, changing it to become even more lewd and sensitive. In this manner, a hornet with a body and heart melted by pleasure is made to be even more sweetly and lewdly tempting to men than a honey bee.

Jorou-Gumo

• Arachne Family • Bug Type

Habitat.....Zipangu region forests, human settlements

Disposition.....Gentle, ferocious, lustful

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals, etc.

A bug type monster, and a variety of arachne that inhabits the Zipangu region. Aside from those living in forested areas, there are also many that change into human form and live in human settlements.

Normally, they have a gentle disposition, which is rare amongst the bad-tempered arachne, and few of them assault people against their will. They are friendly towards humans, especially towards men who are their type. They seduce men by flirting with an attitude akin to that of a prostitute.

From what is written above, it would seem they are not very dangerous monsters, but this is only their face during the daytime. At night, their disposition is very different. They are proficient in the art of seducing men. They approach men with their day faces, and men who were seduced by them during the day will be overjoyed to have them at their side, believing them to be devoted and beautiful.

But upon spending a night together, when the sun sets, they reveal their night faces. At night, they are even more ferocious than other arachne family monsters; they bind men with threads created by their body and give in to their sadistic true nature, unilaterally raping a man repeatedly until the break of dawn, or until they pass out from exhaustion.

When the sun comes up, they return to their gentle day face, but most men who have been with them will be emasculated, and will keep getting ravished by them night after night.

If one still has the willpower to resist even after tasting their night face, and is confident about his stamina, then he should have sex with them while they're in their gentle day face, and conversely unilaterally attack them. If one keeps this up every day, eventually masochism will take root in their heart, and the time they spend in night face will gradually reduce. Instead, the time they spend in day face will rapidly grow longer.

Furthermore, just like the arachne, they build nests using the thread produced by their body, and besides that, they are proficient at sewing. Clothes made from their own thread are high grade products due to both material and craftsmanship. They sell in the marketplace for extremely high sums.

• Beetle Family • Bug Type

ケブリ

Khepri

Habitat.....Desert region (ruins)

Disposition.....Devoted, loyal

Diet.....Human men's spirit energy, demonic energy in the air

Golden scarabs that live in groups in the ruins of the desert region. They appeared out of nowhere in ruins that became abandoned after losing their original master, pharaoh, and started living there unnoticed. They excel at manipulation of demonic energy, and they have the habit of gathering the demonic energy released by monsters normally or during sex, rolling it into a spherical form, carrying it, and storing it in the ruins that are their home.

When a human man enters the ruins, they rush him in a big group and drag him away to the king's bedroom. A man carried off to the bedroom will end up having sex with each and every member of the group of khepri, one after another, while receiving their passionate hospitality. On this occasion, they will pour all the balls of demonic energy that they saved up just for this day into the man one by one.

Due to this, the man's body and lust / stamina, are restored and activated. No matter how much he has sex with them, he never feels tired, never loses his erection, and never runs out of energy. And the man who is showered in plenty of their demonic energy through sex and receives the balls of vast amounts of demonic energy within his body ends up gradually changing into an extremely powerful incubus.

Even a man who just keeps getting ravished by them and tossed about by the other-worldly pleasure in the beginning will eventually seek them out on his own, ravish them, and command them to have sex with him instead of just getting ravished by them as he becomes more powerful as an incubus. By the time all of the khepri of the group have learned the taste of the man who will be their master, the situation is the opposite of the way it was in the beginning. They will be at the mercy of the man's infinite lust and become prisoners of the pleasure and spirit energy given to them by the man. In this way, the "kings" of the khepri are born on the vacant thrones.

After obtaining a king to serve, they fully display their original devoted disposition. They end up serving him with all their hearts, waiting on him hand and foot, feeding him, and attending him through the night as servants, soldiers, and wives of the king. The man who became king will end up living in ruins that were adjusted by them to be more comfortable, eating home-cooked feasts that they poured all their love into, and having sex with the khepri he likes as much as he wants whenever he feels like it. It's their pleasure to serve and work for the king, especially when they are chosen as the king's sexual partner and their body is desired. That's what makes them happier and more ecstatic than anything.

Their goal is the same as that of the pharaohs, the restoration of the formerly lost kingdoms. The area around the ruins where a king was born will change into a demon realm, but it is said that whether it will change into a "bright green demon realm", from the king performing his duties as a statesman even while making love with them day after day, or a "dark demon realm", from the king drowning in their bodies and devotion, spending every day indulging in sex without restraint, depends on the man chosen as king.

• Mantis Family • Bug Type

マンティス

Mantis

Habitat.....Forests

Disposition.....Cold, emotionless (later cold, lustful)

Diet.....Carnivorous: wild animals, etc.

An insect monster distinguished by the huge scythes equipped on both of its arms. Normally they dwell deep in forest, using the scythes on their arms to quickly bring down wild animals, etc. and eat them. Because of how ruthless they appear when observed instantly lopping off the head of a massive beast, they are also called "assassins of the forest," and feared.

It's very rare for a monster, but should they encounter a human man, not only will they not attack, they won't indicate any interest whatsoever. In fact, they couldn't care less. Their expression is always fixed, and they don't feel anything like emotion. No matter what happens in front of them, nothing stirs their hearts. Even when they decapitate a beast and bathe in its blood, their expression doesn't change at all, so "assassin" is a very fitting term. They live every day "just to survive." For that reason, they don't take any interest in anything that isn't necessary for their survival. Since they can't even eat a human man, to them, they are completely worthless.

However, despite this, at a certain point in their lives there comes a time when they absolutely do need a human man. Of course, since they are monsters, in order to produce children they must have human seed, so when mating season comes they do need human men. Even then, they only view a human man as a tool necessary for breeding, and mating just happens to be something necessary for the survival of the mantis race.

When they come into season, they leave the forest and head for roads and places near human settlements. They swiftly capture human men without any emotion at all and take them back to the forest to have sex solely for the purpose of procreation. They skillfully shred only a man's clothes in a careful manner so as not to damage what is inside, and expose his lower body.

Then, without any passion or feeling, they will fondle his penis in a work-like manner to get it erect, using skills they have just because they happen to be monsters. Even when seeing what's about to go inside their body, they don't feel any emotion. Even though it's their first time, they'll be completely unconcerned, and lower their hips with indifference.

That is when everything about them changes. Upon experiencing intense pleasure for the first time, their body inexplicably heats up, and their brain is overwhelmed by the sweet stimulation. In an attempt to make sense of it and figure things out, they shake their hips timidly. Then their body and mind go numb, and they end up understanding it even less. While still unsure of anything, when they look at the face of the man they're mounting, their own chest and face will rapidly grow hotter. Then they'll naturally move their face close to his, and kiss him.

When their lips come in contact with a man's, even though they shouldn't understand it, they'll naturally clamp down on the penis and begin moving their hips roughly to guide it deeper and deeper inside. Before long, semen is released, and at that very moment, their heart, which used to be empty, becomes filled with a mysterious warmth for the very first time. By having sex with a man they realize for the first time how good it feels to have sex with human men, and just how endearing men are to them.

After that, they don't just live to survive. They start to live for the sake of living together with their man and having sex. Once they know the taste of a man, they'll never let him go after their first time having sex. Their scythes will end up being used to protect their man and hunt for him. And then, every night in bed, they'll mount their man and feel plenty of that incomprehensible happiness in their body, so their heart will be completely captivated. They'll rub their body against their beloved man and make love passionately. Afterwards, they go back to their emotionless state just like before, but they do blush faintly when around their husbands, and you can likely see their lips forming into a smile just barely.

• Papillon Family • Bug Type

モスマン

Mothman

Habitat.....Forests, mountainous areas

Disposition.....Simple, meek, warm

Diet.....Herbivorous, prefers flower nectar, tree sap, fruit juice etc.

Moth monsters with soft fur covering their bodies and large wings with peculiar patterns. They prefer to dwell in dark places, but have a tendency to be attracted to lights. They have a special sensory organ that detects a human man's spirit energy as light, and they fly around wandering in pursuit of human men, drawn by the radiance of spirit energy.

They have a gentle disposition, but also have simple thoughts and values, and the only thing on their mind is mating with human men and getting pregnant. When they're fond of a man, it's directly linked to becoming pregnant with that man's offspring, and for that reason bearing their partner's offspring and the act required for that purpose are their greatest expressions of love. When they find a human man that strikes their fancy, they flap their wings especially strongly and shower him with powdery scales. This powder has a bewitching effect, and those who breathe in a large amount of it will temporarily become simpleminded to the same degree as them. In other words, they'll start having primitive thoughts rooted in biology like "there's a good female right before my very eyes, so I want to impregnate her and make her have my children."

When these females who just want to get pregnant with the child of the male in front of them attack a man in this state, he will be unable to refuse them. They will both then have sex to impregnate / get pregnant, and semen will be poured inside her womb. Pure pleasure will easily make a man their prisoner when he's unable to think due to the state of simplemindedness.

Once they've obtained a husband, they start to sense their husband's spirit energy as an even stronger and warmer light, to the point that other lights feel dim to them. To them, this light is like the only light in the darkness. Their heart and body are always drawn towards that light, and they desire to nestle close to their husband as if to aggressively fawn on and cling to him. And once they touch the light of their husband directly, they get an unlimited urge to have his warm semen poured inside and have life dwell within their womb, and then it makes them want to make babies with their husband even more.

Their powder doesn't drop when they're flying normally. It only scatters if they flap strongly. They don't usually deliberately try to scatter it either. Most of the time, they scatter it unconsciously when they flap their wings strongly because they became aroused and happy from finding a man. In this way they are easily moved to action by emotion, but it's really something else when they're overjoyed after becoming pregnant with the child of their beloved husband. They get so excited they fly around here and there, and scatter powder all over the entire area around them.

Of course, the area will become full of couples having sex for the sake of impregnation and fertilization, so it's troublesome. However, among monsters it is commonly believed that inhaling this powder before sex with one's husband increases fertility, so it's generally welcomed when they "go out of control."

• Mukade Family • Bug Type

大百足 (オオムカデ) Oomukade

Habitat.....Zipangu Region (woods, mountainous regions, caves)

Disposition.....Gloomy, ferocious

Diet.....Meat. Wild animals, etc.

A monster having the lower body of centipede that mainly inhabits the Zipangu region. The upper body has the form of an alluring beauty who gives off a dark impression. Just as it appears, they have a melancholy, uncheerful disposition. However, they also have a ferocious nature at the same time, and when they spot a human man, they aggressively assault and attempt rape.

In Zipangu, they are one of the races regarded as "kaibutsu." They prefer dark, wet places, and they normally live in shadowy woods, deep in the mountains, caves, etc., but sometimes they reveal themselves before humans when seeking a man as a breeding partner.

They have extremely potent poison within their bodies. When they spot a human man, they use the mouth of their upper body, along with the maxillipeds around their neck and at the tip of their tail to bite and inject poison into a man's body. Men injected with this poison experience a rush of pleasure around the place where they were bitten at that very moment, and their bodies lose all strength. In fact, the poison is so potent that even if they don't do anything for a while, the man will continually experience an intoxicating pleasure at the place where he was bitten. After poisoning a man in this way, they will coil their long body around the man, embrace him tightly, and bind him with their countless number of legs. Just like their disposition, they violate a man with melancholic copulation.

The potent poison and ferocious disposition isn't all that's terrifying about the oomukade. They're obsessively clingy and affectionate towards their prey to the point that it borders on paranoia. Once they get a man, they're never ever willing to be apart from him. Until he becomes entirely theirs, they continue to copulate a countless number of times, continuously spoiling the man's body and heart with love and pleasure.

Though they are dangerous monsters as such, they have a huge weakness to "human men's saliva."

They have high resistance to their own poison, and are normally unaffected by it. However, when this poison combines with a man's saliva, a magical transformation occurs, resulting in another poison that they have no resistance to. If a man's saliva enters their body through their mouth or vagina, etc., the altered poison violates their body from within, and for a while, their entire bodies will end up being continuously attacked by overwhelming pleasure.

In spite of possessing such a weakness, love and the sweet taste of spirit energy overwhelm them, and they kiss men against their better judgment, so they are likely to end up ingesting saliva on their own. Additionally, what appears like a pattern on their upper body is actually poison glands. It is said that powerful pleasure courses through their body if they have these poison glands licked by a man, though it's not as potent as when they take in saliva directly.

• Papillon Family • Bug Type

パピヨン

Habitat.....Plains, forests

Disposition.....Devoted, warm

Diet.....Flower nectar

Papillon

A butterfly monster with beautiful, colorful wings, and the grown form of "greenworm". Having the form of a lovely maiden, if they dance through the sky, their wings shimmer with sunlight, captivating the eyes of those who behold them. It is said that that alone is enough to charm the hearts of men. They are considered beings that symbolize spring, and as if to embody this, the insides of their heads are filled with a warm happiness. Due to their warm personality, they treat anyone with gentle kindness, calming the hearts of those who come into contact with them just like the "spring season".

They show warm affection and devotion towards their husband who emerged from the chrysalis with them, as if to repay him for copulating with them countless times inside the chrysalis and providing mana. Shrouded in a sweet, florid charm more so than an obscene allure, they do not attack human men or directly seduce them. If their husband doesn't desire sex, they seem to be happy just spending time at his side and will just try to exert every effort to make their husband's life more pleasant. However, as an imago, the papillon is a form specialized for "reproduction" with the goal of producing offspring.

While having sex countless times inside the chrysalis and memorizing the places where their husband looked and touched them, their body matures into an imago, and becomes specialized for arousing their husband's desire. During the larval phase, the odor alluring to males is only released from the feelers, but a papillon's entire body is covered in a sweet fragrance mixed to be even more in line with her husband's preference. On top of that, from all their experience of having sex with their husband inside the chrysalis, their body transforms so that they can induce even greater pleasure in their husband, resulting in more semen and making it easier to get pregnant. They know this through their own experience.

In other words, their mere presence alone will excite their husband's reproductive urges and spur him to seek intercourse. For that reason they just remain by their husband's side, beautiful and devoted, so that they can always be ready to receive him.

Their larval form specialized for "eating" is hungry all the time, but the same thing can be said of their imago form which is specialized for "reproduction." Likened with "spring", the inside of their head is filled with happiness just from living with their husband even without sex, so at a glance they don't appear to be "hungry", but in their heart, they are drooling for more, hungrily longing for intercourse to deliciously eat their husband and add to their happiness. Still, in the proper sense of eating, just sipping nectar from a small amount of flowers is sufficient, however, if a large amount of treats are right before their very eyes, they'll show themselves happily eating with an appetite that shows no sign of abating.

Among the papillons, very rarely there are also those who became a chrysalis and matured without having been able to acquire a man, and their nature is different than that of normal individuals. Since all the nourishment that was originally meant to be given to a man inside the chrysalis is retained inside their body while their adult body is formed, the resultant body is more voluptuous and plump, and tends to overtly exude sexual charm, and they'll openly flaunt their allure to approaching males. They still won't attack men or directly seduce them, but in this way, individuals appear with a mode of life specialized for getting their hands on a husband one way or another.

• Worm Family • Bug Type

サンドウォーム Sandworm

Habitat.....Desert region

Disposition.....Simple

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals, etc.

Enormous worms that inhabit the desert region. At first glance, they seem to have the appearance of a monster from the age of former demon lords. Inside the mouth there's a part that looks like a tongue or bait in the form of a beautiful woman, but the woman part is actually the main body. They can move freely as if swimming through the sand, and when they dive into sand, by closing the part that's like the mouth of a monster, they can store their soft, sensitive main body inside and protect themselves with the shell that's like a rocky surface.

With low intelligence and a huge appetite for food and sex, they are dangerous predatory monsters. They normally lurk beneath the sand, but when prey animals or a potential human mate pass above them, they leap out, open their shell, seize the prey inside the mouth, and drag it into the sand like a monster swallowing its prey whole. Ostensibly, it looks like a monster preying on a man, but of course, the man isn't actually crushed and digested inside. However, instead, he'll be seized and ravished by the beautiful main body waiting in the mouth using her entire body like a tongue.

In contrast with the shell, the "inside of their mouth" is covered with soft walls of flesh, and these have the alluringly soft body of a woman. This body is specialized for making love with a man and the entire thing is like female genitalia. Every part of it gives pleasure to a man, and functions as an erogenous zone for tasting pleasure from him. Also, inside the mouth mucous called "digestive fluid" is secreted. It doesn't cause harm to the human body, however it eliminates resistance to pleasure by dissolving any clothing or armor a man is wearing, and sticking to his skin. They tend to be misunderstood because of the violent appearance of the way they capture a man, but their disposition is not ferocious at all.

In contrast with the violent method of capture, they gently and thoroughly pleasure a captured man as through licking and tasting every inch of his entire body, having alluringly sticky intercourse.

When they obtain a husband, they live together inside "the monster's mouth" to protect their husband from the desert's temperature, sand, and dryness, etc. In such circumstances, not only do they close the shell to keep their husband from getting a single scratch or a single grain of sand stuck on him, they also spread a wall of flesh and cover it in mucosal digestive fluid, making the barrier so durable that it makes them look paranoid. In this manner, men who become their husbands spend pleasure-filled days having sticky sex in a bedroom of flesh engulfed by the sandworm herself.

• Beetle Family • Bug Type

ソルジャービートル Soldier beetle

Habitat.....Forests, mountainous areas

Disposition.....Meek, cold, obedient, poor emotional expression

Diet.....Herbivorous: tree sap and fruit, etc.

Bug type monsters covered in a sturdy exoskeleton that's like armor, impenetrable by both swords and arrows. They are heavy cavalry from birth, possessing organs of modified exoskeleton that are like weapons, shields, and horns, as well as a massive lower body. In combat, they appear as perfectly trained soldiers, never faltering or falling into disarray. They are taciturn, and poor at expressing emotion. On top of that, it is difficult to read emotion from their peculiar insect-like eyes.

The race's horns, weapons, and shields come in a variety of forms. They are classified into different varieties such as "scissor beetles", like the individual in the illustration, that have two horns, and a scissors-like weapon, "lancer beetles", that have a single horn, and a spear like weapon, and "shield beetles", that don't have horns, but do have a sturdy great shield.

They prefer sweet things, and they swagger through the forest with their heavy-looking body, lured by the sweet fragrance of their favorite treats: tree sap and the mana of human men. Also there are wings inside the carapace on their back, and they can even fly, if it's a short distance.

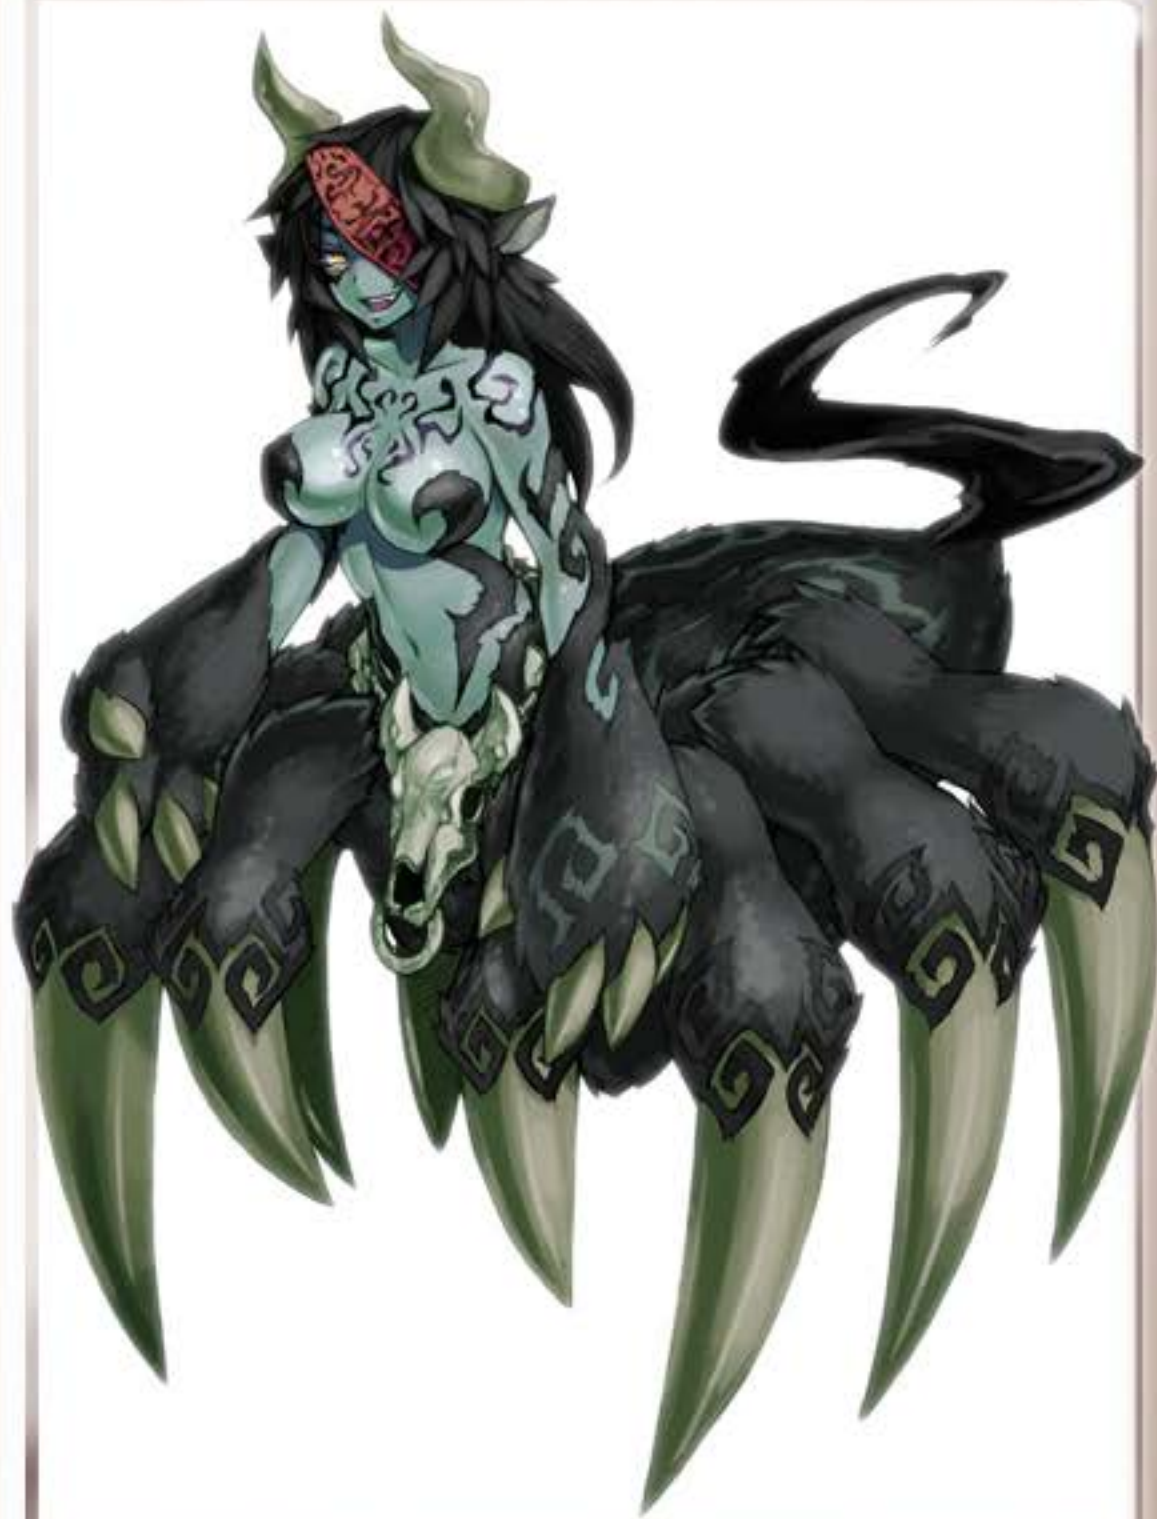

When they find a human man after being lured by the scent of his mana, they will attack for the sake of producing offspring. But before they copulate using their vagina, they will first stick their face in the man's crotch towards the source of the sweet fragrance of mana, and crawl their tongue along his penis in attempt to lick up semen. By doing this, they first learn the taste of the semen of the man who will be their partner before going straight to breeding. It is said that once they have recognized a man as their husband in this manner, they will always follow along and wait nearby, behaving as if they were a soldier escorting him. From the manner in which they fight, they appear unexpressive, without the slightest hint of emotion, so they tend to be mistaken as heartless warriors.

However, once they get married, it becomes apparent that they certainly have a heart despite their lack of expression. They really like the taste of semen when they drink it through their mouth, and they will often want to drink it. It is said that sometimes they will even suddenly move their face towards their husband's penis and beg for his semen. When they are intently focused on licking up semen, which is like the sweetest nectar to them, somehow there's a spark in their eyes that shows just how enthralled and delirious they are. And when they're not able to drink semen, they puff out their cheeks and display an expression of dissatisfaction, even if it's only slight.

When copulating with their husband, they seize him and hold him in place with the forelegs growing from the area near the border between their human body and their lower body. If he tries to get away, they'll shake with repugnance, and show a selfish side that would be impossible coming from an emotionless soldier. And when semen is poured inside their womb, the spark of female ecstasy can definitely be seen deep within their moist eyes.

When they find a feeding site or a human man, if they also bump into another individual of the same race, it is said that in that case the two soldiers will have a duel. It is a custom for deciding priority when it comes to food and men, and in effect raises the skill level of their race as a whole. But in the case of a duel fought over a man, the outcome doesn't determine who will claim the man, instead merely determining "the order in which they will copulate". Ultimately, after copulating with one, a man will end up having to copulate with the other. For that reason, should a man try to escape while they are dueling, they'll cancel the duel on the spot and change their target to the man; swarming him like bugs going after oozing tree sap.

• Arachne Family • Insect Type

ウシオニ

Ushi-Oni

Habitat.....Zipangu region (mountainous regions, caves)

Disposition.....Ferocious, lustful

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals, etc. spirit energy of human men.

A kind of arachne that only inhabits the Zipangu region. They possess the upper body of a woman with green skin, and the lower body of a spider covered in black hair. They're one of the monsters feared as "monstrosities" in Zipangu. Even among monsters, their nature is especially ferocious. Tainted with immense desire, thoughts of savagely raping and violating men are always on their mind. So great is their lust that their body is always hotly seething.

Normally they live deep in the mountains, but sometimes ushi-oni come down from the mountains and attack human settlements seeking men. At that time, if they find a man who strikes their fancy, they'll shoot out webbing that is almost like rope, tie him up, and take him back home deep in the mountains. Then, as if to unleash all the bestial lust that had built up until then, they'll rape the man and indulge in spirit energy. No matter how much sex they have, their boundless bestial lust is never satisfied. They never get tired in the middle of sex, and they will keep thrusting their hips against a man relentlessly.

Once they've gotten a hold of a man, they never show themselves around humans again, secluding themselves in their nests deep in the mountains. They end up spending most of the day doing nothing but violating their beloved man.

Their blood is thick with demonic energy. Sometimes humans appear who try to slay these "monstrosities," but those who cut them are always bathed in their blood as a result. Those who have been bathed in this blood are twisted by the high concentration of demonic energy. If it's a human man, then he'll soon change into an incubus whose mind is all but consumed with screwing monsters. If it's a human woman, then she'll end up becoming an "ushi-oni" herself.

When a woman transforms into an ushi-oni, the great transformation is not only external, but internal. No matter how docile her former personality was, it will change into an extremely aggressive personality like that of the ushi-oni. The bestial desire to rape men and corrupt them with her own hands boils up. The bestial lust causes her body to begin to hotly seethe as though boiling, and she becomes unable to think about anything but raping men. And then, guided by bestial lust as a new "monstrosity," she'll head for a human settlement to get a man.

Additionally, the resilient body of an ushi-oni soon regenerates after being wounded. On top of that, they don't even appear to feel any pain from minor wounds. They aren't at all disturbed by the intruders who go after them. It is even said that they ignore the intruder before and after they're cut, continuing to violate their man.

• Fly Family • Bug Type

ヴァンプモスキート Vamp mosquito

Habitat.....Forests, waterside, wetlands

Disposition.....Mean

Diet.....Flower nectar, etc. the blood of human men

A bug type monster known as the "vampire of the insect world" because they bite humans and suck their blood. They have meticulously cunning personalities, and as soon as they spot a human man who will serve as prey, they will fly around the area for a while and wait for the perfect moment to bring down their prey before attacking.

Their wings make a distinctive buzzing noise during flight that disturbs the hearts of those that hear it, and alerts them to the monster's presence. At the same time, the person will lose concentration and get distracted. For that reason a man being targeted will already be seized in their embrace by the time he comes back to his senses, and he'll end up having his blood sucked.

Their ordinary staple food is flower nectar. Although they prefer men's blood, they don't suck it indiscriminately. They mainly suck blood during sexual intercourse with a man. Not only is blood used as nourishment for the sake of egg-laying, by obtaining the information from blood and mana contained in blood fluid in advance, they're able to adjust their own womb to more easily receive that blood and mana based on that information. In other words, they perform the act of blood-sucking to make it easier to bear the offspring of the man who will become their husband from then on, and adjust themselves to serve as excellent mothers suitable for raising children that inherit their father's blood. In short, sucking blood is like making a kind of marking for them. They're not just after the blood, they're after the man himself in order to form a couple.

Also, during blood-sucking they inject the man with venomous saliva. Due to the venom, the place blood was sucked from will become hot and itchy and throb, seeking pleasure. No matter what the man himself does, he won't be able to obtain pleasure, and the throbbing will not subside.

The bite mark will become like an erogenous zone, one that only reacts to the one who sucked the blood. The throbbing can only be soothed if they touch it, crawl their tongue along it, or suck blood once again, and the pleasure induced is like having the penis teased. In this way, once a man has had his blood sucked, even if he tries to run away, he'll be agonized by the bite mark which will throb in yearning for the vamp mosquito. They would never let such a man escape. Instead, they would fly around the area and wait for the perfect opportunity to sexually violate the man.

They also perform blood-sucking during sexual intercourse, increasing the number of bite marks that serve as both erogenous zones, and proof that a man is theirs, thus increasing the throbbing and pleasure in their husband's body. Additionally, every time they suck his blood, their womb will yearn for their husband's semen, becoming a more lewd and pleasurable organ for sucking out semen, and they will then suck on the penis with it and sip semen.

Furthermore, concerning their alias "vampire of the insect world", it seems the original vampires (kyuuketsuki), vampires (vanpaia), feel upset about it. Some vampires (vanpaia) have stated the following, "if they're going to bear the name vampire (kyuuketsuki), they should have pride as monsters, and not easily bear humans offspring." However, it seems it was humans that started calling them that name in the first place. Of course, the vamp mosquitoes themselves are busy copulating to become pregnant with their husband's offspring, so they appear to be completely disinterested in this subject.

• Worm Family • Bug Type

ワンダーワーム Wonderworm

Habitat.....Wonderland

Disposition.....Calm, lustful

Diet.....Herbivorous: fruit juice, the smoke of tobacco made from mushrooms, etc.

A race unique to "Wonderland" having the soft, squishy body of a caterpillar. The progenitor of this race was a lone "Greenworm" who wandered into Wonderland and incurred the wrath of the "Queen of Hearts" by devouring all the sweets that were meant for a tea party she had been looking forward to. It all started with her being struck by a spell meant to curb her appetite, which resulted in the loss of the ability to go through the pupal stage and change into a "Papillon", which is a butterfly. Thus, they became a race whose body grows while still in caterpillar form. And so, unlike the original race, it is no longer necessary to eat large amounts to become an imago, enabling them to be active for long periods of time even with extremely scarce meals such as small amounts of fruit juice, etc.

Since the nutrients and mana which originally would have been stored up for the transformation into an imago instead are all used to fuel the body's growth, regardless of them eating very little, they tend to grow much larger compared to the original race and easily end up with a voluptuous figure. Perhaps because of having to maintain such a large body with little nutrients and mana, they aren't very active, and their words and actions seem more laid-back than the original race, giving them a languid aura.

One of their most especially distinctive traits is the fact that they have a penchant for "tobacco" made from Wonderland plants, mushrooms, etc., and regularly smoke it to sate their hunger. The colorful, sweet-scented smoke that drifts in the air around them causes those who breathe it in to feel intoxicated and horny, while at the same time rationality and common sense are diminished, as if stifled by the smoke. What's more, due to having continuously inhaled this smoke, even the breath that escapes their lips has pretty much the same nature as the smoke itself.

When conversing, each time their mouth opens, breath spills out, and men will start to feel a dizzying intoxication as they listen to their seemingly mystifying words. The sight of them languidly sighing will be unbearably alluring, and just being blown on from up close will be enough to cause entrancement in a dream-like mind state. With diminished reason, one is powerless to resist the sexual desire that is laid bare. Common sense that has been shaken and shattered will reform in a manner suitable for a denizen of Wonderland. Just like the monster before his eyes, so too will the man feel that it is proper for two people who want each other to sate their sexual desires together, and they will end up lying together without it being clear who initiated it.

Since they are already adults, they have little "appetite", but given it's an adult body specialized for reproduction, it's as if the greenworm's endless appetite is replaced with an equivalently insatiable lust. Although they seldom attack human men themselves, once a man is mystified by their smoke, if invited for sex, they'll seize their husband with their long elastic body and its countless legs to keep him from escaping the pleasure and intoxication.

Furthermore, it seems their mouths get lonely when not smoking tobacco, so they frequently seek kisses during sex, and the breath thereby blown into their husband causes endless lust. They also love to perform fellatio and have a penis inside their mouth. They're like hungry greenworms the way they suck it and refuse to let go, while lovingly blowing on it so that their yummy treat will remain permanently erect.