

• Lamia Family • Reptile Type

アポピス

Apophis

Habitat.....Desert region

Disposition.....Bold, lustful

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals etc. human men's spirit energy

Dark-colored serpents that are said to carry the power of the nether realm within themselves. They are monsters created by god as adversaries of the "pharaoh". It's their duty to prevent the awakening of the pharaohs who sleep within the ruins of the desert. In the age of the former demon lord, many pharaohs were buried forever, never to awaken, at their hands. The desert is dotted with master-less abandoned ruins as a reminder. However, that's an ancient tale. As of the present, their nature has been changed due to the influence of the demon lord, and they no longer kill pharaohs although they do still oppose them.

They have a powerful and peculiar neurotoxin within their body. They bite and inject it into the body of their prey. If the prey is a woman, the poison eats away her entire body with extreme heat and pleasure. Her flesh is remade to become greedy and ultra-sensitive to pleasure, and it even makes her mentally morph into a lustful, monster-like disposition of simply wanting love and pleasure with a companion. Once the apophis' venom enters the body of prey, it never ever disappears. Prey, delirious and entranced by the venom, end up swearing allegiance to the apophis and become their servants.

If the person corrupted by the venom is a monster, then even a monster with a disposition that is warm, timid, serious, emotionless, pure, or stubborn and that would normally not assault a man will become aggressive and try to straddle and ravish men. If it's a human woman, then she'll be reborn as a lamia, and as apophis' loyal servant, she'll seek love and pleasure and begin to attack men. And even in the case when human men are bitten, along with the pleasure and heat, they'll change into incubi that will always want to drown in pleasure with monsters and who will make suitable husbands for monsters. They also use this venom to subdue pharaohs and place them under their command without killing them.

Corrupted by the venom, and reduced to mere monster females, pharaohs will forget all about the affairs of state, etc. seek their husbands, and seclude themselves in their room with them indefinitely. In that manner, an apophis becomes the ruler of a kingdom instead of the pharaoh. The entire region around the ruins that were the kingdom of a pharaoh changes shape into a "dark demon realm" of everlasting night where the sun never rises. A fascinating atmosphere hangs in the air, and a monster paradise where they can lapse into delirium and revel in mutual heat with their husbands is born.

An apophis who's obtained her own kingdom is likely to keep aggressively biting monsters and human women with her venomous fangs to convert them into servants in order to expand the demon realm and make it even more obscene. Anubis who become an apophis' loyal servants will come up with obscene, licentious schemes to expand paradise and enable themselves to indulge in love and pleasure, and sphinxes will aggressively assault travelers, and even raid human settlements to bring many men into the demon realm, increasing the number of residents of paradise.

Additionally, they themselves are greedy for love and pleasure in the same way as those corrupted by venom, and if there's a man who strikes their fancy, they'll pour plenty of venom into him, and have sex with him after binding him with their snake body to try to make him their prisoner in body and mind. They are also monsters, and they're lamia family on top of that, so their attachment to their husband is extremely powerful. Those individuals who find a husband before attacking a pharaoh, which was supposed to be their entire reason for existing, completely lose interest.

• Lamia Family • Reptile Type

バジリスク

Basilisk

Habitat.....Caves, desert areas
Disposition.....Cool, gloomy
Diet.....Carnivorous: wild animals, etc.

A race of lamia that have the upper body of a woman, the lower body of a snake, and part of their body covered in plumage. Their disposition is docile and very quiet, and not only are they passive about assaulting men, they won't even get too close to humans. They dwell in quiet locations where there are no signs of people.

They have evil eyes with dreadful venom that will ruin a person just from being exposed to their gaze. This extremely potent venom relaxes all the muscles in their prey's body, rendering them unable to move; at the same time causing the prey to heat up with a feeling of ecstasy equivalent to the burning sensation of a monster in heat, and the prey becomes unable to think clearly.

Furthermore, the mana inside the prey's body is distorted. The distorted mana leaks from the body much more easily, and when it spills out the penis swells so much that it looks ready to burst. Even the slightest stimulation will cause a release of semen as if a dam had been broken. Along with this, it makes it easier to absorb mamono mana into the body, so it results in a state where conversion into an incubus or monsterization can easily occur.

Moreover, the distorted mana is as virulent as the basilisk's venom, and even newly produced mana will be converted into venom that violates one's own body. For that reason, for detoxification, it is necessary to have all the venom sucked out, or have all the body's mana sucked dry in one session at the hands of a monster. It is said that in the age of the former mamono lords the basilisk's deadly venom was such that it could kill a human in a single glare. Monsters no longer rob humans of their lives in the current era, but still, if a human's mana is completely sucked out for the sake of detoxification, they will certainly be transformed into either an incubus or a monster. So the fact that it brings about the end of one's life as a human in a single glare probably hasn't changed.

In this manner, they do possess powerful evil eyes, but they can't control them too well. For that reason, they always hide their face with something such as a mask to seal the power of their evil eyes. With their normal vision obstructed, they instead use heat sensing and mana detection in place of their field of vision. The mask also has the role of making it so that they won't confirm a man by sight.

This is because should they directly catch sight of a human man, they would become unable to control their love and desire for the man, and end up going wild and attacking him. With their evil eyes exposed, even if they can't control the power of their eyes, they follow their monster instincts unconsciously and direct their deadly venomous gaze towards a man. A man will be reduced to mere prey waiting to be eaten as they coil their serpentine lower body around his body. After entwining their womanly body and gluing both bodies together, they will persistently copulate over a long period of time until all the man's semen is milked dry and the venom is removed.

While their hips are glued together and semen is being released, they will continuously gaze at the man, who has gone from being their prey to their husband, with their evil eyes full of obsession in a manner befitting of the lamia family. And then, they'll fill their husband's body with venom imbued with their love, and ruin him with the pleasure of ejaculating within her incessantly.

They possess dangerous evil eyes, but as long as no unforeseen accident occurs, luckily, they almost never take off the mask themselves. Before they take off the mask and lose control of themselves, they do have weak points as well. If they sniff a man's body odor from up close, or have a man whisper in their ears, they will turn bright red and collapse. According to them, it seems "the stimulation is too intense when wearing a mask."

• Lamia Family • Reptile Type

バニッポ

Bunyip

Habitat.....The waterside of rivers and lakes, etc.

Disposition.....Ferocious, timid, cowardly

Diet.....Carnivorous: wild animals, etc.

A kind of lamia that lurk by watersides. Their body is covered in fur, and their eyes emit an uncanny light. They have a large build for a lamia family monster, and possess both superhuman strength and agility at the same time, using their long tail as a spring to launch themselves at their prey.

The bestial nature dwelling within them is extremely powerful, and since their reproductive urges are ferocious, they are feared as a race that aggressively attacks men. Despite the ferocity of their appearance, on the contrary, normally they are so quiet that it's eerie, and they live by concealing their body in water in order to hide. For that reason, they are frequently mistaken as "beasts with bird beaks", "beasts with a giant tail", and so on, by many who have witnessed them, and they are often treated as an unidentifiable monster.

They move around inside the water without making a sound, and when they spot a man, after gazing fixedly at him, they launch themselves upon him without so much as a warning. They certainly do look like reasonless monsters launching an attack to kill and devour their prey.

On the other hand, they are beings endowed with high intelligence who also possess enough reason to suppress their bestial nature under normal circumstances. If you can come into contact with them, you'll probably be able to catch a glimpse of their quiet and timid true character too. However, despite being able to converse, it doesn't seem to be their strong point, and they're extremely poor at conversing with men in particular.

For example, from what I've heard, even if they think that they want to become intimate with a man, they aren't able to express it in words, and their head goes blank in the presence of the man, so they become unable to speak properly.

In other words, when they appear to be gazing fixedly at prey, it's actually that they're worrying about how to strike up a conversation with a man, and when they suddenly leap upon him, it's the result of their own urges going out of control due to the confusion.

Typical of lamia, they prefer to coil their serpentine lower half around their husband's body and use their entire body to embrace him. From the way they closely adhere to their husband with the entirety of their body, we can see the obsession with males typical of serpent monsters, but at the same time, the seemingly genuine happiness they appear to exhibit as they draw their face close to their husband makes them also appear just like a little girl hugging a precious stuffed toy and refusing to let go.

Even among the lamia family monsters, their serpentine body is especially soft, and their mana-imbued fur doesn't lose it's fluffy feeling even after soaking up water, so they are proud of "feeling extraordinarily good to hug". Their body is devilish in an even different sense than that of a succubus (inma), and it's said that when wrapped in their body, the person embraced will feel so pleasantly comfortable that he'll lose strength and surrender himself.

When they've succumbed to their bestial nature, sex with them is like being mercilessly wrung dry of mana by a monster that's seized hold of its prey: violently ferocious. After losing it, they probably don't feel any resistance to their own state. However, when not in that state, even when coiled around their husband, embracing him, they also appear to blush out of embarrassment for what they had done like an innocent young woman, and then even when having sex, they'll move their hips in a timid manner while paying close attention to signs from their husband. Yet, just like how when prey is taken into the giant maw of a monster lined with sharp fangs, where the slightest little nibble will inflict fatal wounds, even when they barely shake their hips, regardless of the intention of the bunyip herself, violent pleasure will be induced in the penis being snapped up, and the man will be led to ejaculation as if being greedily devoured.

• Dragon Family • Reptile Type

ドラゴン

Dragon

Habitat.....Caves, mountainous regions

Disposition.....Strong-willed, arrogant (depending on conditions, meek, lustful)

Diet.....Meat, wild animals etc.

The highest level monsters, combining a strong body with high intelligence. They are fearsome monsters with sharp claws that can tear through steel, and breath of fire that can incinerate anything. They have been titled "rulers of the Earth" because of the enormous power they possess. They take an arrogant, high-handed attitude towards not only humans, but other monsters as well.

They have taken on the form of women due to the Mamono Lord's power, but because of the enormous power they already possessed from birth, they haven't been completely subverted by her power. They can even temporarily change into the form of the enormous dragons from the time before the current Mamono Lord took over. Also, they love treasure, including precious metals, jewels, and rare magical items. Their lairs are full of all of the treasure they have collected.

Although they have high intelligence, their behavior and emotions are strongly governed by their instincts, and they can't go against them. They are "rulers of the earth" and they look down on humans as worthless, insignificant beings. They try to act uninterested, but because of the influence of the Mamono Lord's power, by instinct they can't help but recognize human males as "males of their race."

For that reason, exactly opposite of their attitudes, their instinct gives them a powerful aversion to harming humans. Because of it they can't harm people, even though they have the power to take a human life effortlessly. They even end up having endearing feelings for humans.

When they find a man who strikes their fancy, they can't go against their urge as monsters. They take him back to their lair, give in to the urge, and have sex. The men taken away by them are treated as their most valuable "treasure," and are not allowed to leave their sight. The men will end up being loved dearly, and showered with affection, continuously receiving pleasure from having sex with them.

However, if their instinct ever recognizes a human man as "a male more powerful than themselves," they are ruled by an instinct that forces them to "obey the male, have sex with the male, and bear young." If this happens, there's not a trace of the "dragon, ruler of the Earth" left. They fawn on their husbands, and strongly seek sex, becoming mere "female lizards."

Furthermore, due to their great haughtiness, they won't meet with people; they often turn the tables on would-be dragon slayers and defeat them. So it is not uncommon for a dragon to go her whole life without having had sex with a human man. When such a dragon dies, mamono mana gathers in the corpse after it loses strength, and binds with her lingering regrets about never having mated with a human man or had children. She will then be resurrected as a "dragon zombie".

After resurrection, the decay of their body is stopped by mamono mana, but in exchange their pride and rational mind rots away. They become exactly "female lizards" that just greedily desire to mate with human men and produce offspring.

• Dragon Family • Undead Type

ドラゴンゾンビ Dragon Zombie

Habitat.....Caves, mountainous areas, wetlands

Disposition.....Simple, lustful, ferocious

Diet.....Human men's mana

"Dragons", the rulers of the earth, turned undead. Due to the height of their arrogance, dragons look down upon human men as unworthy, and there is no small number of them who will live out their entire life without having ever copulated with a man.

Mamono mana gathers in the corpses of such dragons, combining with their lingering regret over not having been able to find a man to be their husband and have children with, reviving them as "dragon zombies". In exchange for an imperishable body, their mind, rational faculties, and pride as a dragon completely rot away in a slimy manner, and they become exactly "female lizards" who are constantly dripping with love juices and will only seek what they couldn't obtain while still alive: to copulate with a human man and produce children.

They are instinctual, instead of rational like they were when still alive, and their obsession with sex will drive them to attack and attempt to violate a human man upon spotting one. Their thoughts are simplified, and their movement slows down a bit, but since they still fully retain the power of a dragon, one of the highest of all monsters, and becoming undead makes them inexhaustible, they'll persistently continue pursuing a person they recognize as male until the bitter end. Furthermore, their fiery breath from when they were living changes into "rotten breath" that's very similar to miasma, and those hit by it will have their rational mind and will to resist rot away, men becoming males driven only by the instinct to reproduce with the female in front of them.

Their body, which was firm in life, will loosen up, and their figure changes to be favorable to males, feeling pleasant to embrace, combining softness and resilience in such a way that if a man runs his fingers over their breasts and buttocks, the softness allows his fingers to easily sink in, as if to indicate a willingness to receive a male, and the resilience is enough to push them back.

Their vagina greedily hungers for a man, and while it is elastic enough to easily completely engulf a penis, once inserted, it will be held snugly inside and won't be let go. Love juice is excessively secreted just like saliva and used as lubricant, and the penis is greedily devoured with a squish, making the man their prisoner.

They are extremely ferocious, but conversely, it is said that if a man were to attempt to violate them, they would immediately grow docile and accept it. When attacking a man, the dignified expression they had while still alive is gone, yet neither do they have the look of a predator confronting prey. It's merely the slovenly expression of a female fawning on a man. As far as they are concerned, launching an attack on a man is also just an extreme form of "coaxing", and all they're doing is fawning on a man. In other words, if a man seeks to copulate with them himself, then they have no reason to attack.

After obtaining a husband, when basking in the instinctive bliss of being desired as a female by a male, and having their womb filled with male semen, their appearance no longer gives off an aura of ferocity as it did when they were starving. However, by becoming undead, the instinct to protect the male they obtained as their treasure is also strengthened. Should it seem that their spouse will be harmed, they'll become half-crazed, fly into a rage, and spew "rotten breath" haphazardly. In the case of men, the effects of the breath will wear off in time, but in the case of women, their resistance to monsterization will be corroded along with their rational faculties, and they'll change into undead such as "zombies", "wights", etc. It can easily result in a horde of undead.

Echidna

• Lamia Family • Reptile Type

Habitat.....The deepest parts of dungeons

Disposition.....Lustful

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals, etc.

A type of lamia having the upper body of a woman with bluish skin, and the lower body of a snake. Their magical power is among the highest of all monsters. There is a sharp contrast between them and other lamia family monsters. There are differences in personality depending on the individual but what they have in common is that all of them are extremely lustful. Very few exist, and in most cases, most of them dwell deep within dangerous dungeons, so they hardly ever appear before humans.

The reason they live deep within dungeons is because only superior men can make it there, and they want to have their babies. The dungeons they dwell in are laden with treasures for luring humans, mysterious potions, and the best magical items, etc. They sometimes change into human form using their great magic power. They then spread information about treasure among humans or request the aid of monster slayers themselves in order to lure superior adventurers to their dungeons.

After getting past numerous traps and repelling monsters, once an adventurer reaches the deepest part of the dungeon, he'll find them waiting for him as the final barrier and the reward for clearing the dungeon. Unable to hide their arousal upon finding the one who will become their husband, they'll coil around the body of their beloved man with their snake body, bind him, and go straight for sex. As if to let the man savor their entire body and force him to remember it, they use their entire body including their tits, mouth, and vagina, etc. They give men a devilish pleasure that is equal to a succubus, and take them prisoner.

Because it is instinctual for them to accept superior humans as husbands, they can sense the existence of humans who will eventually become heroes. It is said that among the echidna there are some who raised their own men with their own hands before they even showed the slightest potential as heroes, supporting them from the side, helping them grow, and then in the future mating with them, drowning them in pleasure, and taking them prisoner.

Thus the important female supporters of heroes in stories have actually always been echidnas, and it seems that in most cases, the heroes who supposedly disappeared and went off somewhere after saving people are actually off somewhere alone with an echidna continuing to have sex.

Out of all the monsters, they have an extremely peculiar nature. Of all the children they ever give birth to in their entire lives, only the first is an echidna, the same as her mother. The children born after that are all varied in race, appearance, and nature, and new types of monsters that have never been seen before are also often born. Thus, they are called "the mother of monsters". The reason they seek superior men is to birth even more powerful new monsters.

After getting a husband, and charming him, they devote themselves to baby-making and get pregnant with their husband's children in order to fulfill their desire to give birth to the greatest monsters. Eventually, they'll gently pat their hugely swollen stomach with an expression like a holy mother full of benevolence, and they'll think to themselves, "my wonderful child born from my great husband's most delicious semen, how lustful will you be, and how lascivious in appearance? How will you tempt men, and how wild will you go with pleasure?" When a mother of monsters thinks about her child to be born, she naturally smiles.

• Dragon Family • Reptile Type

ジャバウオック Jabberwock

Habitat.....Wonderland

Disposition.....Lustful, bold, proud

Diet.....Men's spirit energy, carnivorous, wild animals, etc.

A kind of dragon peculiar to "Wonderland." They are high rank monsters possessing a powerful body, and high intelligence. Under orders from the queen, they block the path of those who wander into Wonderland. The progenitor was originally a normal "dragon", but when the "Queen of Hearts" laid eyes on her proud figure, she maliciously cast a spell and changed the source of her pride from "being the absolute strongest, overpowering others" to "being the absolute most lascivious, overpowering others."

For that reason, in spite of their awe-inspiring, domineering presence, their minds are tainted with sexual thoughts. Even though they have sharp claws that can easily tear through steel, and powerful legs that can shake an entire area if they kick the ground, they use them solely for gently embracing men, and getting on top and shaking their hips. They prefer to use their mouths to take in a penis and slurp semen over devouring the flesh of prey, and the pink breath they release heats up the bodies of those showered in it, causing them to burn with passion. Their high intellect, superior to that of humans, is used just to determine how to improve sex, and they desire to always be painted in semen and pleasure.

Even though they stain their bodies with thick white stuff, their sublime dignity isn't lost since they take pride in it. They look down on human women, and other monsters, and take a domineering attitude, but it stems from the conceit that they're the most lascivious of all beings.

The role they were given by the queen is just like a game to her no matter what, and they themselves care little about whether they win or lose. For that reason they aggressively attack visitors, but they often go easy on human women and monsters, etc. and pretend to lose. However, if it's a man that strikes their fancy, their attachment becomes extremely strong, and they'll definitely try to get the guy and bring him back to their den.

And then, together with the man, in order to become the most lascivious couple in Wonderland, and have the most semen poured on them, they'll delve into the depths of indecency.

If deemed worthy as a male, a man can subdue them. However, in their case, unlike the original race, they have no interest in simple military prowess. It's better to express your interest frankly. You can profess love, or just tell them up front you want sex. It's more effective if you get a massive erection upon seeing them without even waiting for them to attack, showing off your unrestrained desire, and it's even more certain if you expose your penis and shove it in their face, pushing your desire on them.

They have a tough body that can't even be penetrated by a sword of steel, but confront them with the sword of flesh and the thick fragrance of semen, and male carnal desire will shake their brain, causing them to collapse in dizziness. The instinct that recognizes when a man before them is a male who will constantly desire them no matter where or when, and paint their body and womb with semen, is also what changes them into "female lizards" who want nothing more than to please a male, and bear the male's offspring. It's the same in appearance as when a dragon yields to a man, and falls as a single female, but being the most enjoyable female for their husband, and making their husband the happiest male in Wonderland who indulges in the most female pleasure is also the pride of the "jabberwock" race, as well their dearest wish.

• Lamia Family • Reptile Type

ラミア

Lamia

Habitat.....Deserts, mountains, and caves

Disposition.....Strong-willed

Diet.....Carnivorous: wild animals, etc.

Monsters that have the upper half of a beautiful human woman and the lower half of a long snake. Lamia may live in villages where their own kind gather, or slip into human villages, but basically most of them act independently. They are highly intelligent, with a snake-like cunning and persistence, and it's said that they always obtain whatever human men they have their eyes on.

They lurk in the shadows, concealing their serpentine lower half, while showing off their beautiful upper half to lure men that happen to be passing by. This is when they'll use their sweet voice laden with powerful charm magic against a man. A lamia's sultry, bewitching voice will spell-bind a man in a tight hold like a snake coiling around its prey, refusing to release him, and the man will be lured towards the lamia, staggering.

After a man has approached in this manner, they'll swiftly wind their long lower body around him, binding him and robbing his body of freedom, only to then have sex with him. Even in the middle of sex, they continue to whisper of love in the man's ears. With pleasure and ecstasy, their charming voice grows even more lustrous, and it will continuously reverberate inside the man's head. While being continuously charmed during sex, a man will come to enjoy even the sensation of the serpentine lower half coiled around his entire body and not just the soft skin of the woman intimately pressed against him and the feel of her lower body where they are joined together. He will start to feel that the lamia, including her serpentine lower half, is even more charming and lovely. Eventually, even a man's heart will be seized by her, and he'll end up surrendering himself to the constriction and the pleasure he receives.

Men who strike their fancy are kidnapped and taken away to lamia villages, and will end up as their husbands. These tenacious girls are extremely stubborn about expressing love to their husband, and they will coil their lower body around him, refusing to let go.

When it comes to sex they always spend a long time at it while entangled with their husband. They relentlessly shower their husband with love and affection, and are also deeply jealous in equal proportion. If their husband cheats on them, they'll squeeze tightly around his entire body, and he will end up being thoroughly ravished and milked.

They molt at regular intervals and will shed and discard the skin of their lower half just like a snake. Immediately after molting, their lower half becomes extremely sensitive, and they enter a state in which their entire serpentine lower half is like an erogenous zone. Even the slightest touch from their husband will result in pleasure coursing throughout their body, resulting in a state of powerful arousal. Due to the potency of the pleasure they can experience by coiling their serpentine body around their husband directly after molting, they'll coil around their husband's body and rub against him even more persistently than usual, pursuing coitus in an aroused state.

Lizardman

• Lizard Family • Reptile Type

Habitat.....Caves

Disposition.....Strong-willed, stubborn

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals etc.

A monster with lizard-like characteristics that inhabits caves, etc. Most of them excel in physical abilities. They're warriors able to master using a variety of weapons.

They're always polishing their martial arts. Most of them wander all over the world for the sake of training, so one can probably encounter them in various places besides the caves where they originally dwelt.

They have aggressive personalities, but they basically don't attack human men. However, if they meet a human man that is a "warrior" like them, then that's another story. They'll request a bout to try their skills. Even if one loses the bout, they won't take his life or anything like that, but if one beats them, they would request marriage on the spot, as they have a habit of trying to make a husband of strong men who defeat them in battle.

If one were to refuse, then they'd probably just keep chasing after him and bugging him for a long time until he agreed. If one were to still refuse even after that, then they'd get sick of waiting and move into action.

Just like other monsters, in order to make a man their husband for sure, they'll try to tempt him, assault him, and have sex with him. Even though they devote their lives to martial arts, monsters are monsters. They have ample instinctive knowledge of how to handle a man's sword too. Their well-trained bodies are devilish in nature and can generate exquisite pleasure. And if a man still won't consent even after that, then there's no limit to the extremes to which they will go until a man does feel like it.

As warriors, they leave a stoic and firm impression, but on the contrary, they will serve the man who becomes their husband with all their heart and thoroughly perform their duties as a wife. That's because they have an instinctive drive to serve the man who defeats them, as much as they do to seek out battles.

After obtaining a husband, they will come to strongly desire to give birth to their husband's children. For them there is a strong instinctive desire to be impregnated by their husband who is even stronger than them. That's one of the basics of the species. The lizardmen want to be with men stronger than they are, give birth to strong children, and raise them to be even stronger than themselves, resulting in the entire lizardman race growing stronger.

• Lamia Family • Reptile Type

メドゥーサ

Medusa

Habitat.....Caves, towers, dungeons, etc.

Disposition.....Strong-willed, stubborn

Diet.....Carnivorous: wild animals, etc.

A high level type of lamia, which possesses the upper body of a human woman and the lower body of a snake. They are very few in number, so they mostly live by themselves. Perhaps for that reason, they are awfully lonesome; but because of their extremely prideful and strong-willed personalities, they normally don't show it.

They possess the ability to cause the body of whomever they make eye contact with to harden like stone. Besides catching their prey animals with this ability, they also use it to stop a man from moving so they can drag him back to their lair as their husband for reproduction when they find a man who strikes their fancy.

They also use this ability during sex. In this case only the man's limbs are petrified, to prevent him from moving. They also are likely to try to restrain him with their snake bodies while forcing intercourse. Since they're such extremely lonely girls by nature, when they are joined with a man and embraced in his arms, they may petrify his arms and legs to prevent him from letting go of them. After sex has ended they may even petrify a man's penis and try to have sex with him again because they don't want to be separated from him, or so it is said.

The vagina of a medusa can provide the penis with two different types of stimulation: a squeezing that's pleasantly cool like stone, and conversely, a lukewarm feeling when they begin to seek their man even more and squeeze more desperately. The pleasure provided is likely to be more than sufficient to enthrall a man.

Living things petrified by their ability never die from it. It can be healed if the medusa undoes it herself, or with one of the magic items or medicines circulating through the marketplace.

Also, if they leave a man petrified without choosing him as a husband, generally, before the petrification wears off, another monster starving for a man will carry him off. Then, just when the petrification does wear off, he'll find himself having sex with that monster.

A medusa's hair turns into snakes from the middle. Each of them can move freely, but since they share the same will as the medusa, if she isn't hostile, there's probably no worry of being attacked. Medusa are stubborn, and pretty much never show their true feelings, but the snake hairs are different from the main body and reflect their feelings and consciousness as is. For that reason, the hairs are straightforward, just the opposite of the stubborn main body, they will aggressively wrap themselves around a man they like and snuggle up, so it is possible to discern the true heart of the medusa from the behavior of the snakes.

Also, just like the lamia, they are extremely jealous. If a man were to cheat on a medusa, he would end up being left petrified for days with his wife coiled around him and roughly milking him by constantly having sex, so be careful.

Dragon family Reptile type

龍 (リユウ)

Ryu

Habitat.....Zipangu region (Large ponds, swamps, and rivers, etc. near water)
Disposition.....Devoted, warm
Diet.....Omnivorous, wild animals, etc. men's spirit energy

A kind of dragon that inhabits the Zipangu region. They're distinguished by having a long lower body like that of a lamia. They wave their bodies to swim freely through the water, and despite their lack of wings, they dance elegantly through the skies. One of the highest level monsters, they possess a power so awesome it can control weather. Their beautiful forms and elegant figures are awe-inspiring to those who behold them. Among some humans, they are regarded as sacred beings, and worshiped as "water gods."

They possess a gentle disposition and are full of benevolence, so they aren't monsters that aggressively attack humans. However, it is said that they pretty much have no problem whatsoever finding men because the humans who worship them provide men as offerings, and besides, there are many men who personally desire to become a god's husband. In private with their husbands, the ordinarily imposing, dignified figure of a god is nowhere to be seen. Instead, they reveal a side of themselves that's sweet, and devoted, befitting of a monster of Zipangu. However, the amount of desire they have for their husbands, and the amount of spirit energy needed to maintain their immense power makes ordinary monsters pale in comparison. After being sought by such charming beings, their husbands are unable to resist, and the amount of time they spend coupling makes the amount of time ordinary monsters spend coupling also pale in comparison. He'll end up contributing a great deal more spirit energy, an amount far beyond what a man would offer an ordinary monster.

From time to time, they perform a "ritual of rain-calling" when requested by humans. However, in order for them to control weather, they need a vast amount of demonic energy, especially in instances where they need to control the weather for several days in a row.

They have to constantly replenish their supply of demonic energy, and its source, spirit energy, so a human man is absolutely necessary. In other words, in order for them to bring blessed rain for three days and nights, their husbands also have to have sex with them constantly for three days and nights, continuously pouring in spirit energy. They must continuously be filled with the spirit energy of a man dear to them.

Somewhere under their rear, there is one scale out of all of them that's growing backwards called a "reverse scale." It is said that one should never ever touch it. If a man should touch this scale, the ryu will be overwhelmed by a rush of pleasure so intense that it'll almost cause them to pass out even though they're monsters. This causes them to temporarily lose all sense of rationality and self-control. For a while they entirely become beings of lust and passion, transforming into female beasts who can think of nothing but raping men, indulging in pleasure, and filling their wombs up with semen. Any man foolish enough to touch her reverse scale will find his whole body constricted by her lower body and end up getting raped again and again until she satisfies the urge to fill her womb full of semen.

Additionally, just like the original race of dragons, due to their vast demonic energy, they can temporarily change into the form of a massive dragon from before the present demon lord took over. However, they don't like to intimidate humans, so they almost never show this form in front of them.

• Lizard Family • Reptile Type

サラマンダー Salamander

Habitat.....Caves, volcanic regions, etc.

Disposition.....Frank, strong-willed, passionate

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals, etc.

A variant of lizardman (p. 66) having red scales that appear as if burning. They inhabit places with comparatively high temperatures such as volcanic regions, etc. They have frank, and hot-blooded personalities, and they are genuine warriors that seek out battles that burn as hotly as flames. They travel in search of humans that are worthy opponents.

They have similar traits to lizardmen, and they basically don't attack human men, but in the case that a human man is a warrior like them, it will ignite their fighting spirit, and they'll challenge the man to a bout. When the fight begins, their battle-lust swells, and their tail lights aflame, blazing with intensity corresponding to their arousal. The more they get into the battle they're having with the man, the longer it drags on, and the more tension there is, the more rapidly their arousal swells, and the intensity of their tail flames is strengthened.

In most cases, if the battle ends, their arousal subsides, and along with that, the flames of their tail die down in intensity, but regardless of whether or not they won the fight, if they considered that fight to be their best fight ever, then their arousal from battle won't subside no matter how much time passes. Instead, the flames on their tail will also keep burning bigger and more violently the whole time. This is the proof that they've acknowledged a human man as their most worthy opponent. After finding a worthy opponent, as a warrior, they feel a joy that can't be topped, and experience arousal like they've never felt before.

And then, this arousal soon turns into another kind. Just looking at the face of the man who turned out to be a worthy opponent will make their face grow hot, and at the same time, they'll feel a new kind of violent throbbing in their chest, something completely different from battle, unlike anything they've ever felt until then.

Then, while retaining their intensity, the flames of combat arousal change form into the flames of a monster's carnal lust for a human man, making their body flush hotly.

Driven by these emerging feelings of yearning for the man, and an urge, they will shout and declare their love for the man on the spot, seeking for him to become their husband and have sex with them. Even if the man refuses, once the flames have flared up, they will never disappear. They'll chase the man even to the ends of the earth, continuing to shout about love. The more the man runs from them, the more violently the flames will blaze, and eventually, they'll grow so huge and hot that not even they themselves can control them. Once that happens, they'll be unable to stand the arousal and desire that's burning their body. They'll let the monster's female urge that blazes hotly take over, and they'll try to push the man over and forcibly have sex with him.

After obtaining a husband, no matter how much time passes, the flames of love for their husband never disappear. They continue to convey hot words of love to their husband, and before they even think, their hands will be reaching for their husband. If pleased by their husband's words, they'll spontaneously embrace him firmly, and if they see their beloved husband's face, they'll become unable to bear it. They'll kiss so deeply that their tongue is licking around inside his mouth, and if their body flushes seeking their husband's body, unable to bear it, they'll knock him down and straddle him, wildly shaking their hips.

• Lamia Family • Reptile Type

白蛇 (シロヘビ)

Shirohebi

Habitat.....Zipangu region (mainly ponds, marshes, rivers, etc. near the water's edge.)

Disposition.....Devoted, warm

Diet.....Carnivorous: wild animals, etc

A type of lamia that only inhabits the Zipangu region. They're a monster that's distinguished by having white skin with little pigment, white hair, and the lower body of a white snake.

They have a docile, quiet personality which is rare for a monster. Those who behold their appearance are somehow given an impression of ephemerality. They are miko who serve monsters known as "ryu" who are worshiped as gods of water by some humans. They also have powerful water magic within themselves. They're often the targets of faith, along with "ryu."

As is typical with monsters of the Zipangu region, when a human man strikes their fancy, they fall completely in love, becoming so devoted as to offer up their very body and soul. Due to this nature, they never attempt to forcibly rape men. However, they never ever give up on a man once they've fallen in love either. No matter where the man runs to, they'll chase him to the ends of the earth.

She'll continue to shower him with love and devotion until he does desire to become joined with her. In most cases, they are so persistent that a man can never escape. Eventually he surely becomes charmed by the love and mamono mana that he's continually showered with. He'll end up wanting to have sex with her and become a couple.

Her appearance, which gives off an ephemeral feeling as if swaying like water, gives the man the urge to spontaneously embrace her in his arms. And if the man draws her body near to him in that manner, she'll smoothly and quietly wind her snake body around his body in a way that feels like quietly sinking into water. During sex she receives all the man's heat and rage as if gently loving him with her body and heart, and the man will experience pleasure along with comfort, becoming engrossed with her.

Also, they have an extremely jealous side. They hate it when their husband comes into contact with another woman. If their husband is meeting in secret with a human woman or another monster, or cheating on them, then they become consumed with jealousy. Once their quiet anger fills to the brim, they seek to pour their mass of mamono mana into their husband. In contradiction to their watery nature, the mass of mamono mana born from their feelings of jealousy appears almost like raging flames.

Once implanted in the man's body, the flames of jealousy ignite his body and soul from the inside, causing him to be overwhelmed with a maddening lust for her body. The urges brought on by the raging flames within the man cannot be satisfied by any female but her.

Only by being wrapped in her snake body filled with the power of water magic, and mating, will the urges subside. During this time the shirohebi freely exhibit themselves in a manner true to their nature as monsters that is so lascivious and entrancing that it would be unimaginable to those only familiar with their ordinary form. With the crushing weight of love and pleasure, she thoroughly instills her husband with the notion that she herself is the best female for him, and that he doesn't need any other woman but her. The sex on this occasion will be unlike the usual quiet comfort of soaking half his body in water. Instead, it will be full of passion like a swamp seizing him, and it will give him pleasure and ecstasy incomparable to anything he could ever experience normally, making him become dependent on her as a prisoner of her body.

And even after that, the flames never completely disappear. They continue to smolder within the man. She is the "water" he must soak in, and he ends up being unable to calm down without having his whole body wrapped in hers, continuing to mate.

Dragon Family Reptile Type

7-6

Wurm

Habitat.....Wetlands, mountainous areas, caves

Disposition.....Ferocious, simple, meek

Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals, etc.

A type of dragon that has the upper body of a woman, and a long, snake-like lower body. Because of the powerful, magnificent way they advance by crawling on the ground, they are also called "earth dragons." Even though they're a lesser race of "dragon", in terms of raw power they're no better or worse than dragons. Their body is sturdy enough to crush boulders by ramming, they're covered in hard scales, and they have endless stamina. However, their intelligence is extremely low, their thoughts are simple, and basically all they think about is mating with human males. Their personalities are ferocious, and since they aggressively assault human men when seeking a reproductive partner, they are feared as monsters even more dangerous than dragons.

Wurms are especially dangerous once they're in a state of arousal after detecting a male. If there's a boulder in front of them they'll smash it and continue onward. If a man hides in a forest they'll mow down all the trees and beeline straight to his position. Once they've spotted their prey every obstacle is meaningless to them, and they'll never stop until they get their man. It's difficult to run, but even more difficult to fight and drive them away, so it's even said that the easiest way to stop a worm is to give her a man. Actually, as long as they're able to catch a man, the inside of their head becomes colored with thoughts of nothing but sex with the husband they just obtained. They will either bind the man with their long body and begin sex right then and there, or bring him back to their lair to take their time.

Their bodies are covered in hard scales, but the scales can recede, exposing soft, sensitive skin so that the abdomen, and especially the front part of their upper body are very sensitive to receiving pleasure from the heat and touch of a man's body. To them, their snake belly and bare skin are their weak points during mating. In fact, they very much enjoy feeling a man with these weak points, and like a lamia family monster, they normally coil around the man and try to glue their bodies together as closely as possible. When they assault a man they are extremely ferocious, and the sex is also violent, but once they've settled down with a husband, they think of their husband as "a male for impregnating themselves" and they think of themselves as "a female for bearing that male's offspring." For that reason, it's surprisingly easy to tame them as long as one can take the lead during sex, exploit their weak points, and exhibit his power as a male. Though they possess the overwhelming power of the dragon family, because of their simple and meek personalities they can become very affectionate and obedient.

Additionally, like the original dragon, it's possible for them to change into the form of an enormous dragon from before the demon lord seized power. However, since that form is inconvenient for having sex with men, and all they think about is sex, they don't assume that form if given a choice.

• Dragon Family • Reptile Type

ワイバーン Wyvern

Habitat.....Mountainous areas
Disposition.....Abrasive
Diet.....Carnivorous, wild animals etc.

With both arms being huge wings this dragon species is known as the "Wyvern." With the same powers as other dragons, this variety can also temporarily return to the form it had before the current Mamono Lord's ascension. While its physical strength is inferior to a dragon's, its huge wings give it exceptional abilities in the air, able to turn much tighter and outdistance its cousin when it comes to speed.

Unlike the dragon, they are neither haughty nor prideful, never looking down on humans. However, they are heavily driven by their monstrous instincts, have an abrasive personality, and are very willing to attack human men if they want to copulate. When they desire a mate they will take to the skies and circle a large area, and when they finally spot a man they like they will initiate an "attack" by diving out of the sky and swooping down onto the man. They will then pin the man with their strong legs and begin to ravish him. Afterwards, they will take the man back to their home and zealously mate with him, their goal being to bear the man's children.

Knights, called "Dragoons", are known to use dragons as their mounts instead of regular horses. Dragons though, despite being the iconic representatives of their race, rarely do this, their pride making it a Herculean task to convince one to let you ride her. While dragons lend their name to the "Dragoons", the lack of the typical draconic haughtiness in wyverns means they are actually the more common mount amongst dragon knights. However, while they are easier to control than dragons, a wyvern has an abrasive nature and they are monsters who would prefer to straddle and ravish their knight more than to be straddled themselves. Even becoming a married couple doesn't necessarily guarantee that you'll be able to treat her as a mount.

If a knight attempts to mount a wild wyvern, there will be a struggle about whom the superior is and who will be "mounted." If you fail in your attempt to gain dominance she will instead mount you every day, squeezing out your semen as she rides you. A safer method than this is to obtain a wyvern's egg and train her from a young age to act as a dragoon's mount.

In order for a knight and his wyvern mount to become one and improve cooperation, it's crucial that they spend a lot of time together and develop a more loving and trusting relationship by having plenty of close physical contact. For such reasons, in some countries that produce many dragoons, children who will be dragoons in the future are brought up together with the wyvern children who will become their mounts. As childhood friends, fiancées, brother and sister, or master and servant, eventually love will blossom; they will become sweethearts, and eventually marry. By nurturing this love for as long as possible, they gain a strong understanding of one another, creating the strongest dragon knight pairings.